Weather Warming up

Warm temperatures are expected this week at least until Friday when things will get colder again.

Today (Tuesday) light snow flurries are expected along with northerly winds and highs between 2 C and 4 C.

According to a forecast for Drayton Valley and area temperatures will reach a mild 4 C for a high on Wednesday with a 20 per cent chance of snow. Lows near -3 C with cloudy conditions.

Thursday's forecast is much the same with highs near 4 C, along with clouds and a small chance of snow.

On Friday the temperatures will dip below zero again as highs reach -5 C and lows drop to -10 C. The extended outlook also calls for a 60 per cent chance of snow on Friday.

Carlos Cartwright and Pierre Hodgkinson warm up for the weekend.

Bronze Gloves coming on weekend

Boxing day is coming early to Drayton Valley. More than 100 boys are expected to lace up their boxing gloves this weekend for the Alberta Bronze Gloves, being hosted by the local Derrick boxing club.

Fighters with four fights or less, over 11-years old, are eligible to compete in the two-day affair at the Rec Plex.

Ray Duperron, one of the local coaches, says action will get underway at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday with more bouts at 7:30 p.m. On Sunday the boxers will don the gloves for the 1:30 p.m. final.

Duperron says they are hoping for a good turnout.

"Good turnouts help us out," he added.

The club last hosted a major province-wide card in 1983 when the Silver Gloves were held here.

"We're hoping to make this (the Bronze Gloves) an annual thing here."

MLA working on commitments

By Lorne Christensen

Whitecourt MLA Peter Trynchy has labelled the proposed new MD of Drayton Valley a "tax grab."

Trynchy told The Western Review he doesn't support the proposed municipal district and considers it a "tax grab."

Trynchy made the comments just before his annual supper held in Evansburg last week.

The supper is part of his "annual tour" of his constituency. Trynchy said he tries to have the meetings yearly so he can see what his constituents are concerned about.

"I listen to the constituents and try to respond," he added.

During his speech to the more than 100 gathered at the Evansburg Legion, Trynchy thanked those who had voted for him in the last election. He also hinted he may run again.

"Those who didn't vote for me, might have another chance to vote towards me," he told the crowd.

MLA Peter Trynchy

"I've never made a promise: I make commitments and follow through."

Trynchy told the audience he made 26 commitments during the last election and 75 per cent of those had been "started or completed."

"I'm well on my way," he added.

During his short speech Trynchy touched on several areas of concern including agriculture, small business, transportation and rural private telephones.

The private telephone issue met some opposition from the crowd as one person wanted to know what would happen if they didn't want the private line costing $450. Trynchy responded by saying "most of the people supported it" but there might be a way out for people not wanting the service.

The Whitecourt MLA was also questioned on his stand on seat belt legislation. "I support seat belts and I wear them all the time but I don't have to have big government telling me to wear them," he added to the applause of the crowd.

He added it was impossible to "enforce" seat belt legislation.

The MLA also made a presentation of $10,000 to the Pembina Agriculture and Recreation Society. Society president Al Benwood accepted the funds to help "upgrade the arena."

Subsidies are big problem says Clark

Joe Clark

By Gillian MacLellan and Stacey Orlesky

The Minister of External Affairs, Honorable Joe Clark was the guest speaker at a noon luncheon in Drayton Valley last Wednesday.

Throughout his speech Clark was focusing on trade. He stated our biggest problem was the level of subsidies. "Farmers in Europe are subsidized three times more than Canadians and U.S. subsidies are double ours," Clark stated. "We can't compete on treasury, but on efficiency," he added.

He went on to say that at an international summit, where seven countries were represented, only one (West Germany) relies more on trade than we do. "One in every three jobs in Canada depend on exports. We have to trade in the world to have an economic base," the Yellowhead MP explained.

Clark went on to say that due to the lack of a large captive market to trade into, we (Canada) are beginning to depend more and more on trade. "We could improve trade in two basic ways; first, we could quadruple population tomorrow or look for access to adjacent markets, namely the U.S."

From this, Clark said a good agreement would be created, but further negotiations must proceed. "We would be an example of what could be done in the larger world," he added.

He feels Canadians need confidence in their ability to stand in the world. He has no doubt Canadians can stand up to the Americans. It has been done before.

When replying to a question from the audience, Clark said, "Canada has never stood alone and certainly can't now." He also made reference to Canada as a global village.

Trend is towards talking toys

By Lorne Christensen

Toy talk.

As Christmas nears the toy talk this year is about talking toys.

They're the rage.

From bears to parrots, they all talk back and they seem to be the biggest item on the toy market this year according to a Western Review survey of 13 stores in Drayton Valley.

Each year the toy manufacturers try to come up with something new, something to capture the lucrative toy market. Each year parents, uncles, aunts, and the host of other people buying toys have to make the decision — which toy is the best.

The Western Review wanted to find out what's hot and what's not, what's new and what's back in the toy world.

At Valley Models and Toys the trend is obvious.

Part-owner Sharon Baines says 'Smartie Bear' is one of the most popular items. He talks, laughs and goes to sleep.

"The kids love him," she adds.

Another bear, dominating the toy talk, is Popples. Baines says they turn inside out into a ball and are a soft plush toy which is selling well.

Other items in the store which are also going well include the truck series called 'Mask'.

Baines said the Tonka-style series is fairly new to the toy scene. On the games side the "teaching and learning" types seem to dominate.

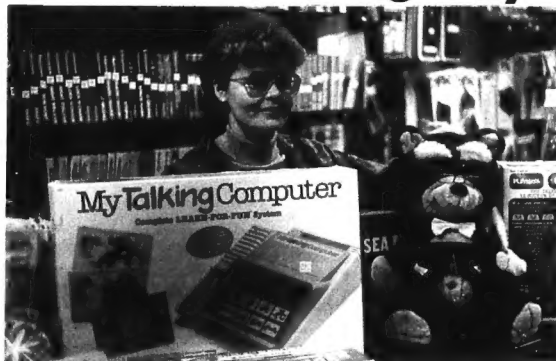

Baines says the games fad has brought back some older standbys like 'Ants in the Pants' and 'Mousetrap', but it has also brought technology to the game front. VCR games available include the very popular 'Charades' along with a host of other videos.

Video games are also popular at The Bay. While they carry a "complete line" of toys the games are some of the hottest items. Games including cartoons rate the highest for the kids.

Other items they have which are going well include 'Popples' and the traditional Harbie and GI Joe series. A Bay spokesman said the talking bears, dogs and other animals are also "really hot." He added the Fisher Price line of toys along with the 'My Buddy' doll seem to be popular.

The talking doll popularity is again evident at The Family Discount Store. "Echo Buddie", a brightly-colored parrot which repeats what you say is popular. Other interesting toys in the store include 'Black Thunder' a battery-operated helicopter. And for the more traditional winter gift, the snow racers remain "very, very popular" said a clerk. Other items they have include a complete line of battery-operated toys along with battery-controlled dolls.

The doll and stuffed animal craze has also hit Fields. While they are really going good the store is also experiencing a run on battery-operated toys. "Anything that makes noise," said one Sharon Baines with Smartie Bear and an educational game.

"Pricing and getting ideas"

salesperson. Fields is also selling a lot of the traditional line of toys in addition to the newer ones popular from TV ads, said a spokesperson.

Plush, stuffed toys continued to be the hot item at Home Hardware. One of their top sellers, Pound Puppy, has a built-in radio. Other 'hot' items included the Super GT Hot Skis along with educational games. Games like Speak & Spell headline this line of games available at the store. They also carry a complete line of toys.

A spokesman from Macleod's said they have a "limited amount" of toys but do have a few on hand.

Penney's, on the other hand, said the 'Smartie Bear' was one of the hotter items. Other talking dolls and animals rated high with electric train sets also making a comeback. A spokesperson from the store said they are noticing television advertising to have a big effect on what's hot. Toys available include rocker Barbie, Lego and Tonka along with the variety of video stories for smaller children.

The electronic trend was also evident at Radio Shack. Robots and remote control car sets are among some of the more popular items. Other items the store carries include train sets and computer and video games.

At Saan's, educational toys and plush animals rated high. A spokesman said the bubble-blowing octopus was one of the 'hotter' items. The store also carries a complete line of "educational" toys along with "stocking-stuffer" type items.

Popples appears to be one of the most popular toys again at Stedman's. The Mattel plush animal rated high although a store spokesman said it didn't have the "Cabbage Patch" potential, referring to the high demand the doll created a couple of years ago. Traditional toys like the Barbie doll series and GI Joe along with Fisher Price also rate high at the store. New toys include the popular 'Mask' series for boys.

Stuffed animals and 'plush toys' seem to be the biggest item at Valley Gift and Stedman's. The store also carries imported plush toys.

Valley West Drugs (IDA) are carrying the "traditional type" toys for this year's Christmas season. A clerk said they go with "customer demand" which tends to follow the television advertising trends.

The final store on the survey list is Value Drugs. They carry a section of toys with popular items like the Rambo and Ninja dolls. In addition the store also has a variety of games, puzzles and dolls. It's the first year the store has carried toys since moving to their new location.

"People are still coming in and pricing and getting ideas," said Sharon Baines from Valley Models and Toys.

Elvin Strand (Mr. Bumble) gets rough with Krystle Mason (Oliver) during opening night last Thursday.

More on Clark...

"We have no choice but to compete in this world. We must face reality. No nation can withdraw from the world," Clark explained.

Two fundamental problems in Alberta's economy Clark spoke of were the energy and agricultural industries. He mentioned artificial problems in the energy industry have been cleared up. Problems left are not caused by policies. They are in the field where no one has the answers, was his reply.

His forecast for the energy sector is an increase in exploration.

Following up on his talk on the 'free trade' issue, Clark was asked about the possibility of holding a debate on the subject in this constituency. "If it would be genuinely helpful, I would be interested," he remarked. Since Clark's visit, it has been learned that Mel Hurtig of Edmonton would be interested in a similar debate. No date has been set.

Following Clark's speech, we asked him if he thought Prime Minister Brian Mulroney should take a more direct and stronger stand in voicing opposition against American policy in Central America. He replied, "No, Canada can do two things.

First, we can criticize U.S. policy, which Mulroney has done, but has had no effect, or, we can take initiatives of our own and attempt to get to the centre of economic problems. We are respected by both sides and should maintain standing."

When asked if there is a possibility Canada would invest in an international Satellite Monitoring Agency, considering this would cost approximately the same as two F18 jets, Clark said, "I can't really answer that. It was necessary that we update our F18 fleet. We have to decide where our priorities in science are."

When asked for a comment on the United States sending military parts to Iran, Clark said, "Canada should maintain strong opposition against any suggestion of exchanging arms."

Joe Clark's visit to Drayton Valley last week was covered by two members of the Frank Maddock high school newspaper.

Stacey Orlesky is managing editor and Gillian MacLellan is the advertising manager with The Mad-Duck Press, the school's monthly paper.

Oliver

'You ain't seen nothin' yet'

By Gary Logie

Fagin's boys are out to steal whatever they can, but they stop short of picking the paying customer's pocket in the DV Players production of Oliver.

Last Thursday's opening night came off like the well-rehearsed, enjoyable play it was.

The six months planning, auditioning and rehearsing under director Judi Thompson paid off as the cast had 150 theatre patrons laughing openly and gasping in shock.

Krystal Mason's Oliver was shaky at first, but her stage fright disappeared near the end of Act I to finish with an otherwise faultless performance.

And from the time Oliver asks Elvin Strand's Mr. Bumble for more grub (remember), Strand's presence demands attention.

It didn't matter if he was courting Vicki Johnston's Mrs. Corney with a witty ballad or frumping himself up in disgust, Strand went over in fine style.

Strand and Vicki Johnston, who teamed up for the finest duet of the night, musically rebounding Mr. Bumble's amorous advances off Mrs. Corney's stuffy refusals, brought open laughter.

The crowd also responded humorously to Shaun Murphy's Mr. Sowerberry.

Murphy is the local hunchback under taker who purchases Oliver to help out in the parlour. His talent isn't restricted to humor though, his singing was also very strong.

But as the saying goes 'You ain't seen nothin' yet' so it was with Ian Johnston's Fagin.

Johnston portrayed the likeable, but parasitical, Fagin with a vengeance. From harmoniously teaching Oliver how to pick a Pocket like the rest of his boys to pondering life at 70 when "nobody cares whether you're dead or alive", Johnston gave the show stability.

Another bright spot in the show is the fine performance of Yvonne Kjoerlien's Artful Dodger. Kjoerlien handles the duties of a promising young thief and Fagin's right hand with solid talent throughout numerous lengthy appearances.

Dennis Harris puts in a good show as the notorious Bill Sikes, one of Fagin's cronies.

Sikes arrives on the scene just in time to find out Oliver is the rich missing grandson of Mr. Brounlee (Jim Wolff).

Playing off Linda Bennett's Nancy, Sikes schemes up a way to get Oliver back. But, when Nancy refuses sparks fly between them.

Bennett also shone in her role adding some fine solo performances.

The remainder of the cast backed up the main players expertly, especially Thaine and Terry Olsen, Dena Smith and Kim Nelson, whose melodious market scenes had the crowd rocking in their seats.

The show's one imperfection is the absence of a curtain during scene changes. A curtain would have allowed scenes to continue rather than having large lulls while the cast moved props. It would have sped things up a touch and gave them better audience attention.

Although Blair Proctor's orchestra filled in to lift the crowd over the low spots.

With opening night jitters now behind them, the three-hour extravaganza should flow effortlessly throughout this weekend's closing.

Catch Oliver Friday night at 7:30 p.m. or Saturday, at the 2:30 p.m. matinee and the final performance at 7:30 p.m. in the H.W. Pickup school gym.

Downhill ski club deserves a better fate

By Frank Ryan, Editor

Continuous calls to Al Dumkee last week drew no reply.

But with all the snow, one can hardly blame him if he happens to be out on the slopes.

Last winter the Drayton Valley Ski Club president didn't get much of an opportunity to use the local hill. In fact, they were only open five days due to a lack of snow. Two winters ago, when conditions were better, the hill was open 33 days.

If there's any one club in town that deserves a better fate, it's the downhill ski bunch.

Volunteers like Al Dumkee have contributed a lot of hours behind the scenes to improve the facility.

Last year for example, the club purchased additional land, expanded the chalet and purchased 32 pairs of rental skis. But because of weather conditions, it was all for naught.

While I've never strapped on the boards, the local downhill facilities have always impressed me. And all the volunteer help that goes along with it.

This feeling is shared by others.

One morning I overheard a local resident talking in the coffee shop. He had been out to the hill and purchased a family membership. He thought the price was very reasonable, even if it meant his family would have to volunteer some time in the kitchen.

Last week's snowfall certainly sets the stage for the ski club's general meeting tomorrow (Wednesday) night. It's scheduled for 7:15 p.m. in the Pembina Resources meeting room. All skiers are welcome.

Let's try Al's number once more. Nope, still no answer.

If the snow continues, Dumkee could be the hardest person to contact this winter.

That is, unless I strap on the boards and catch him out at the hill.

Hopefully, the club will have a record snowfall and good skier participation this season. They certainly deserve it.

I just got new ski pants, my others were worn at the knees from kneeling and praying for snow!

Red uniforms bring back many memories

It's been a long struggle, but we're glad to report a 54-pound loss since returning to Weight Watchers on June 1st.

Just six more pounds to get under the 200-pound mark and 15 more before Christmas...we hope.

Members of the Drayton Valley RCMP attracted a lot of attention during the recent Remembrance Day services.

Just seeing the RCMP in their red serge brought back some fond memories.

While living in Dawson Creek, B.C., I took a year off journalism to assume the position of secretary/manager with the Chamber of Commerce. One of my duties was to arrange activities for the visiting caravans.

Every Sunday morning during the summer months, from 10 a.m. to noon, a member of the RCMP, decked out in his red serge, would pose for pictures with our American friends, in front of the Mile 'O' Post, a four-ton sign, sitting on the main street. The Mile Post marks the official start of the Alaska Highway.

Editor's Notes

A lot of friendships emerged from those meetings between the U.S. travellers and the Canadian Mountie.

Joe MacLellan may have talked himself into a full time job...playing the bagpipes at the Drayton Valley Hospital on Remembrance Day.

MacLellan, along with RCMP Cpl. Tom Turner, Legion president Betty McGee and past president Lou Matlock visited Linda Thompson in hospital on Nov. 11. For Thompson, it was the first time in 37 years that she didn't attend Remembrance Day services at the Legion.

MacLellan, the executive director at the Pembina Educational Consortium, accepted an invite from the hospital staff to play for the patients. It was gratifying to see the patients' response.

Before Canada Post increase the price of stamps again, we're hoping they will take a long, hard look at their service.

For instance, it takes four days for a letter to get here from our correspondent in Breton. The Pony Express was faster than that.

Work crews on 24-hour alert

By Gary Legie

Heavy snowfalls may play as much havoc on the town's budget as it does driving conditions.

Councillor Howard Olsen, chairman of the transportation committee said, "It costs about $20,000 to clean up after a major snowfall and with the yearly snow removal budget being only $70,000, we're looking at three-and-half snowfalls."

But even if the town's budget does get used up, winter won't get the upperhand.

"We'd have to go to reserves because we can't let the town get bottled up," said Olsen. "But it's a bad thing when we go to reserves because then you're dipping into the bank account."

The town clears streets on a priority basis starting with major thoroughfares, school bus routes, the hospital, seniors' residents, downtown and then parking lots and residential areas.

Olsen said on the "average" residential areas are cleared at least twice a year depending on budget constraints.

One thing unaffected by the budget is snow clearing around fire hydrants. Snow is cleared from around them "as required," said Olsen. "We have to keep constant access to them."

One of the largest budget drains comes from hiring dump trucks for snow hauling.

The town owns two graders, two front end loaders, a sanding truck and a snowblower capable of filling a truck in 60 seconds, but must contract out for all trucks. Besides hauling snow away when they can't pile it off to the side, the town also sands daily.

Spotters are used to determine if extra sanding is required and busy intersections are top priority, said Olsen.

In the event of storms, work crews are on 24-hour stand-by throughout the winter to begin clean-up.

Chamber introduces a new brochure

The Drayton Valley and District Chamber of Commerce will unveil their new promotional brochure, Outlook '87, tomorrow (Wednesday) night.

The brochure, a project of the chamber's economic development committee, which deals with the potential of Drayton Valley, will be introduced at the 6:30 p.m. dinner meeting in the new banquet room at the Black Gold.

Tickets are available at the chamber office (542-7578) or at the door.

Drayton Valley MLA Shirley Cripps will be in attendance for the unveiling.

The general public is invited to attend, to hear more about the town's future and get a copy of the new brochure.

Trevor's Gym

Building better bodies goal of gym owner

By Gary Logie
Building better bodies — that's what Trevor LaBranche does.

And just last week he built a better place to do it in. "Because racquetball has fallen off the last couple of years, we decided to make better use of the space we have," LaBranche said in explaining the reasons behind renovating the court into extra gym space.

"People were shuffling their times to come in so we decided to go to a full gym before it got really crowded."

The expansion will also accommodate some equipment.

"We'll be bringing in a PEC Deck, used to enlarge chests, and a Hack Squat to improve upper thigh muscles," he stated. The gym is also buying more free weights and accessories.

But, LaBranche said "our best advantage is that we're open all day, so people can come in on their own time."

LaBranche is also a qualified fitness instructor and is working towards becoming a qualified weight trainer. In the meantime LaBranche said he can still help people set-up weight training programs.

Trevor's Gym is located in the rear of The Rig pool hall in the Derrick Mall.

Santas Anonymous

Toy boxes and money containers have been placed around town as Santas Anonymous start their annual campaign.

Boxes for new toys are located at the Royal Canadian Legion, Skid Shack (in the Derrick Mall), Brendan New and Used, Royal Bank, Treasury Branch, Toronto Dominion Bank and The Western Review.

Cash containers are located at the White Bull, Ben's Meats and The Western Review.

If a company or organization wishes to donate funds to Santas Anonymous, they are asked to call Linda at 542-4509.

Schools in town will be getting involved this year along with the staff at the hospital.

Dogs — never ending problem

By Gary Logie
Town council's decision not to stiffen animal control regulations doesn't mean Drayton Valley is going to the dogs.

Instead of voting for harsher measures of control, the town has decided to implement "an awareness campaign," says Councillor Howard Olsen.

Olsen is chairman of the town's transportation committee, which received a petition last spring asking the town to raise fines and hire another dog catcher.

The petition requested fines be raised from $30 to $100.

The animal's owner would also have to pay a $40 impound fee and $15 for any necessary licensing to get their pet back.

A survey of other town's animal control methods indicated raising fines only leaves the town with more animals to destroy.

Olsen said this would also be the case in Drayton Valley.

"That's exactly right and it would cost us $50, plus pound fees everytime," he stated.

So far in 1986 the town has spent $1,350 to have 27 dogs destroyed and the animal control department runs on a 70 per cent deficit, said town manager Manny Deol.

Deol said the town's "already paying enough" for animal control. He explained the education program "basically" consists of advertising during licensing and talking with people who come in to retrieve their pets.

Although Councillor Tom McGee voted to raise fines, he agrees with council's educational approach.

"It's a never ending problem" finding ways to control loose pets, he said.

One of the petition's founders agreed with McGee's situation.

"It's a never ending problem," said Chris Pastushuk. "When it first started with me it got better, but it's back to the same thing. You still see dogs running around," she added.

"Education is good, but I don't see much they can do," Pastushuk explained.

Local boxers lose weekend split decisions

Two local boxers put up a good fight, but came away losing both their matches in a weekend tournament.

Terry Swartz went up against a Manitoba boxer in the 132-pound intermediate class, but lost a split decision in the Western Canadian Invitational held in Medicine Hat.

Randy McQuaig also lost a split decision to a Manitoba boxer in the 132-pound Jr. C class at the tournament.

For McQuaig the loss may be easier to take as he was scheduled to compete in the 126 lb. class, but was bumped up because there were no other competitors.

Terry Swartz

Neither boxer will fight in the Bronze Gloves tournament here on the weekend because they have too many fights to qualify.

It is the same case scenario for the boxers in the Silver Gloves in Lloydminster, but both qualify for the Golden Gloves in Cardston in January.

The weekend invitational attracted boxers from all four western provinces and the Yukon and Northwest Territories.

School curlers

Two high school curlers watch as a rock slides down the ice. So far about 25 students are signed up for curling and coach Gord MacLock and assistant Jim Wolff are hoping for a successful year. Three are returning from last year's team.

Clubs have to wait until plan complete

Two local sports groups will have to wait.

That's the message from the town after minor ball requested three new baseball diamonds and Tae Kwon Do requested land.

The town is currently doing a "site and structural plan study" at West Valley Park which will put minor ball's request on hold, for now.

George Bergquist, from minor ball, said they requested new beavers, girls and midgets (or juniors) diamonds at West Valley Park.

Bergquist said they hoped to have the beaver diamond "as soon as possible" but everything will hinge on the town's plan.

The local Tae Kwon Do people will also have to wait. They had requested land to build a facility in West Valley Park.

Calvin Bennetfield, town recreation director, said they couldn't "answer" the club's request until the plan had been completed.

Behind closed doors

Learning to skate can be a painful experience. Now, the town has solved the problem.

Not only the constant falling down, but the psychological effect of learning how to skate can be a painful experience. Now, the town has solved the problem.

They're offering a learn-to-skate program for beginners behind the closed doors of the arena. Recreation director Calvin Bennefield said they will run the program if they get enough people registered. Anyone interested can contact the recreation department.

Bennefield says they hope to run the program over three months. Each week the skaters would hit the ice, no pun intended, on Thursdays from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Bridge work

Members of the Pembina Nordic Ski club were out in full force recently as they installed a bridge on their cross-country trails northeast of town. The bridge, used to connect more trails to the system, was built by the high school.

Busted pipe closes arena

The Centennial Civic Arena was closed last Wednesday because of a busted pipe.

Recreation director Calvin Bennefield says the facility had to be closed for the day because of a leak in the line under the cement pad. Fortunately, the break was along the boards, where the ice machine enters the ice.

Although the ice had to be taken out in that area and the floor jack hammered out, Bennefield doesn't expect the problem to affect the ice surface this season.

The matter of building an outdoor rink at MacKenzie Park will undoubtedly highlight tomorrow's (Wednesday) recreation board meeting.

At their Nov. 10 meeting, the board discussed the possibility of putting boards around the 50 by 100 foot asphalt pad, which was installed earlier in the summer, to accommodate demands for basketball facilities.

The board's recommendation to proceed with the rink, didn't get by the Nov. 13 town council meeting. It was simply a matter of money and use.

Recreation director Calvin Bennfield says the town has $3,500 available for the project. However, this is well short of the projected cost of $4,500, the lowest of two bids. Add to that total, the costs of lights and what Bennfield termed, other hidden costs. And, if you wish to go a little further, the cost of a building, where users can change or just keep warm, should be considered.

Rookie councillor Dave Lundberg raised the issue of lights at the Nov. 13 council meeting. Without lights, he suggested the rink wouldn't get much use after 4 p.m. during the months of December and January. His concerns were also shared by Tom McGee and Charlie Miner.

Bennfield admits that when the proposal first went from the recreation board to council, it was hoped the town would find the extra money somewhere. But since that didn't happen, the next move is up to the recreation board. If they can come up with some answers, council could deal with it at their Dec. 4 meeting and the rink construction could start in mid-December.

What a difference a year makes.

Last year at this time Clayton Hines was the 'local hero' after winning the Canadian saddle horse title. At the recent Canadian Finals Rodeo, the Drayton Valley cowboy had a little bad luck, and didn't repeat his '85 performance.

However, both Hines and ladies barrel racer Iris Tutfin, placed fourth overall.

Just to make the Canadian finals is an accomplishment in itself. And, while Iris and Clayton didn't bring home a Canadian title, they bring us a lot of publicity every time they perform.

Baseball Alberta elects Footz

Baseball Alberta elected a new executive at the group's annual general meeting Nov. 1 and 2 in Edmonton.

Wally Footz of Edmonton was elected to succeed Clint Fystro of Peace River as the president of the association. Fystro will move on to the position of past president.

Two vice-presidents were both acclaimed to their positions. Rex Schneider of Taber, returns as the vice-president south, responsible for liasing with four southern zone directors. Ben Dorval of Fort Saskatchewan was acclaimed to the position of vice-president north, responsible for liasing with four northern zone directors.

Elected as zone directors were Ron Mace, Coihurst, Zone 1; George Liddle, Strathmore, Zone 2; John Andriuk, Calgary, Zone 3; Keith McLean, Provost, Zone 4; Tom Bahniuk, Edmonton, Zone 5; Scott Bennie, Hinton, Zone 6; Roy Mills, Vegreville, Zone 7; and Al Berglund, Peace River, Zone 8.

Ross Speers will represent the large association of Sherwood Park and Phil Albert.

Young will represent the large association of St. Albert.

Scary Words

We're gonna make some changes.
There are rumors of a trade.
Some definite adjustments
On this club must soon be made.
The ticket sales are slower
Than they have been in the past.
And if we play the way we have,
The fans will never last.

Our plan involves some movement.
We are set to fill some holes.
It's time to get replacements
In exchange for timid souls.
The current must be history.
Winners and losers leaving town.
Long gone is what the future reads.
Somebody's steppin' down.

You always hear of firing.
Of dismissals, filling ruts.
Apparently, they always say,
We're gonna see some cuts.
Examples, these, of scary words
Nobody likes to hear.
But welcome to the world of sports.
Where one reward is fear.

Energy tip

• Clean lamps regularly as dust and dirt build up can reduce light output by up to 40 per cent.

Lamplighters get snuffed at Whitecourt tournament

The Drayton Valley
Lamplighters had their candle snuffed at the Whitecourt Oldtimers tournament on the weekend.

The Lamplighters got off to a bad start, dropping their first game 10-6 to Fort Saskatchewan.

Despite the loss, a bright spot in the Lamplighters lineup was Herb Reich who scored three goals in the game. Bob Stenberg notched two, while Bill Hays rounded out the scoring with one.

Their second match was an easy 8-1 win over an Edmonton team.

Lyle McGinn and Bill
Hays shared the spotlight with two goals each.

Don Degeer, Stan
Zaniewicz, Dennis McGurk and Herb Reich added one apiece to send the Edmontonians packing.

In the third game of the tournament the Lamplighters' flame had burned out and they went down 5-0 to host Whitecourt.

The eight-team tournament saw teams from Edmonton, Drayton Valley, St.
Albert, Peace River, Edson,
Fort Saskatchewan and Westlock, along with the hosting Whitecourt team.

The oldtimers will try to get back on the winning track when they travel to Castor December 6 and 7 for another eight-team tournament.

Vermilion to host Senior Games

The 1986 Alberta Senior Games will be hosted by Vermilion.

The announcement was made recently by the Honorable Norm Weiss, Minister of Recreation and Parks at the Senior Citizens Centre in Vermilion. Ver-million MLA Dr. Steve West and Mayor David Hughes were also present.

This will be the fourth
Alberta Seniors Games.
Previous hosts were Camrose in 1980, 1982 and 1984 and Grande Prairie in August

1986. A record number of 11 communities bid for these Senior Games.

Approximately 1,000 seniors over the age of 55 will compete in events ranging from slow-pitch to snooker and badminton to chess.

Andrew, Lacombe

Junior B teams fold

The junior hockey league is still going strong with six clubs playing in two divisions. This, despite the demise of the Lacombe and Andrew franchises.

It means each team will now play a 28-game schedule rather than the original 40-game schedule in the Heritage League.

The DV Devils play in the north division with Spruce Grove and Barrhead while the south division consists of Rimbey, Rocky Mountain House and Hobbema.

Each team will play the other teams in their division eight times and the three teams in the other division four times each for 28 games.

The remainder of the open dates will be filled through exhibition games with clubs from other junior B leagues where possible.

Andrew and Lacombe folded recently, just before the start of the Heritage Junior Hockey League season was scheduled to begin play. Both teams folded because of a difficulty in finding players able to commit the time needed to play junior B hockey.

Strikes and Spares

Laura Barker had high single and high triple for the ladies league during the last week. Barker posted scores of 325 and 864. The Angels had the iron high single and the Gutter Girls had the team high triple.

In the mixed league Loretta Thorson took ladies high triple and single with a 599 and 511 while Roger Selmo had men's single at 500 and Gordie Bryant had high triple at 787. Hummers had team high single at 1,174 and Lane Busters took team high triple at 5,187.

Smurfs of the week were Mark Holmgren and Kevin Williams. In the YBC league the bantam bowlers of the week were Ruth Broun at 24 POA (points over average) and Warren Meiner at 75 POA. Dawn Sieben at 53 POA and Chris Kenow had 53 POA for the juniors. Seniors went to Jodi Lemke with 128 POA and Stewart Pederson with 67 POA. Bertha Elliott had 108 POA to lead the Golden Age bowlers for Saturday with Henry Nickolson at 62 POA. Wednesday senior winners were Ellen Siefenman at 64 POA and Paul Piskowicz at 65 POA.

Gym-a-thon

A member of the Drayton Valley gymnastics clubs goes through the paces at the recent Gym-a-thon held in Drayton Valley.

Boys volleyball team advance to provincial final in Strathmore

There is still hope for a high school volleyball crown in Drayton Valley following a weekend tournament in Barhead.

Despite the girls' elimination from further play this year, the boys have secured themselves a spot in the provincial finals, said boys' coach Al Day.

In Barhead the boys went through the early round-robin match-ups with a 6-0 record. They then advanced through the tournament semi-finals with a 2-1 win over host Barhead.

Frank Maddock's luck ran out though when they met Sherwood Park's Bev Facey high school, who handed them two straight losses to win the zone finals.

The boys travel to Strathmore this weekend to compete in the provincial finals because the host Strathmore team failed to make the provincials.

Cable coming to Breton area?

Breton and Warburg could be getting cable television service as soon as September 1987.

A spokesman for Starvision, the company which owns the area's cable television license, said nothing is definite but they hope to have the service in by then.

Dave Graham, the secretary-treasurer with Starvision, said they haven't gone ahead with the project "due to lack of equipment on the market."

The company made a recent application to the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) to have their license for the areas extended.

The application means the company has until September 15, 1987 to start or complete the service to the communities.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Frank Maddock

With xane finals in volleyball wrapping up in Barrhead over the weekend, the school's attention shifts to basketball with team tryouts Dec. 1.

The girls will be coached by Lynette Taal and the boys by Barry Swap. Both are donating their expertise as neither teach at the school.

There's also basketball, of sorts, going on today and Thursday as the Student's Union sponsored shoot-a-thon goes both days at lunch. Proceeds will go towards new team uniforms.

And on Dec. 4 a fashion craze will hit the school as Beauty Culture 32 puts on a fashion show in the gym at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $3 at the school and proceeds will be used to transport a team to an international hair competition in California during January.

Elementary B

It may only be fall, but Elementary B is having a graduation this week.

Paul Vickers' Grade 6s will graduate from their Values, Influences and Peers lifestyle program Thursday at 7 p.m.

The ceremony will be at H.W. Pickup as renovations continue at Elementary B.

As society becomes more conservative, so does Elementary B as they hold a formal dress-up day Friday. Might be a good time to break out the ol' Brownie and get some pictures of the day Johnny wanted to wear a tie.

H.W. Pickup

Report cards and newsletters went home with the students last week. Parents should ask Johnny about them if they haven't seen them yet.

Parent/teacher interviews are going this Thursday and Friday. The time schedule is 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. and 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Friday. Appointments aren't required; instead parents are asked to go to the gym anytime during these hours.

The local AADAC office will be giving a seminar on Drug abuse at the school on Dec. 10.

The school also offers congratulations for a well done job to all members of Oliver occupying their gymnasium these week nights.

St. Anthony's

The advent mass scheduled for this Thursday has been postponed a week to Dec. 4.

But the general ratepayers meeting is still set to go at 8 p.m. on Nov. 27 in the school library.

Last week's budget will be reviewed in detail at the ratepayers meeting, along with any other concerns they may have.

The volleyball teams are gearing up for some busy weekends as they head into the season's home stretch. This weekend they travel to Stony Plain for the separate school tournament.

Breton

Parent/teacher interviews are scheduled this Thursday and Friday in Breton.

It might also be a good time to drop into the school library as they hold a book sale to raise funds.

Although the books are sold through an independent company the school will receive a percentage of the sales.

The Grade 4s picked their first student of the week and congratulations to Chrissy Ebret on her recognition.

Tomahawk

Swimming lessons for the students ended yesterday, hopefully more learned to swim than sink.

And with Christmas just up the road, Tomahawk will be holding their Firemen's Christmas party Dec. 19 in the school.

Lindale

The Grade 4s and 5s entertained the Grade 1s last week with a recorder recital. The older children were decked out in their finest attire and put on a good show, reports the school.

Last week's junior high ski trip to Lake Eden was cancelled due to poor conditions. The trip is now in a stand-by mode as they await more snow.

The playschool is sponsoring another hot dog sale this Thursday.

And congratulations go out to all those students making the honor and distinction rolls at Lindale.

School program gets good report

By Gary Legie

A trial program on life values at Elementary B school has received a glowing report.

The values, influences and peers class was initiated by Grade 6 teacher Paul Vickers who discovered the program while on a teacher exchange in Ontario last year.

Recognizing the program's potential Vickers received authorization to start it here and has met with pleasing results.

"It's a very interesting," said class president Patrick Rurik, "because it lets us learn about things we don't know about."

"It's very interesting for everyone," adds vice-president Cathy Stuhl, "I haven't heard any complaints about it yet."

The program's insight comes from social service organizations, community professionals and field trips.

The first-hand accounts relay information from vandalism to drug abuse directly to the children for them to make their own decisions on, said the class leaders.

"That way you're not just getting it from one person who may not be able to tell you everything."

"But, if you get a specialist they can tell you all about it," said Rurik.

This is especially true when it comes to drugs and crime, said the kids.

"It may help to control some of the crime that's going on because it's telling the kids the consequences of their actions," said Stuhl.

"Everyone that comes in has done a very good job," added Rurik.

They agreed the whole class was especially interested in AADAC's Anne Marie Miller's visit, "because there seems to be so much of it going on in the news."

"There seems to be so much going on about it in the news and it helps us make better decisions. Because we're more well informed it's quite easy to make a decision to or not to take drugs," explained Rurik.

The program's popularity has spread from the class to home, too.

"When I talk to mom and dad about it they think it's interesting because we care about things they didn't know either," said Rurik.

"My parents think it's very interesting and good because it will help me make decisions in the future."

"It makes their job probably a bit easier because I'm learning about things that will affect me later," said Stuhl.

Renovations

Work continues in high gear at Elementary B school. Above, the hallways of the local school are in a real mess as crews renovate the building. Left, a worker puts the finishing touches on a new wall.

Lots of room

Dr. Lookmanjee says he has lots of room in his new Pleasant View Mobile Home Park, located south of town on 50th Street. So far, 24 stalls have been filled. More than 80 per cent of the mobile home owners moved into the new park from out of the town. Lookmanjee, who started working on the mobile home park in December of 1984 admits he's very surprised with the demand for space. The demand for space will see at least two more trailers move in before year-end. He is also planning a park for the trailer court and hopes to have it completed next summer.

'Official' town slogan on hold

Plans to "officially" call Drayton Valley the 'Oil Capital of the World' have temporarily gone dry.

The problem lies in which is actually the largest field in the world, says Chamber of Commerce president Marty Frontice.

Plans to make it official were 'put on hold' when the chamber learned that the Guinness Book of World Records ('86 edition) lists the largest field in Ghawar, Saudi Arabia.

An investigation carried out by chamber members showed that the Pembina-West Pembina field was the largest.

"It has been the slogan unofficially (as Drayton Valley's welcome signs indicate) for the last number of years, but nobody can recall where it came from," Prentice stated.

Until research proves otherwise plans to officially make Drayton Valley 'the Oil Capital of the World' have been put on hold," the chamber president admits.

Atoms lose

The DV Meter Atom As played a strong game against Rocky Mountain House Sun day, but came one goal short.

DV Meter held the lead up until late in the third before surrendering the lead to the visiting squad. Rocky went on to a 6-5 win.

Bryson Kuzek lead DV Meter with two goals and an assist. Eric Schneider netted two goals and Travis Bigley added one goal and an assist in the losing effort.

The team now looks to this weekend when they meet Rocky for a re-match Saturday and are back home Sunday to face Eckville. The Sunday game goes at 2:30 p.m.

Red Cross Cares about on going safety at work, at home and while enjoying leisure activities by offering first aid instruction.

Breton hospital board members are busy

The Breton General Hospital held its regular board meeting recently.

There are three new members on the six-member board following the recent municipal elections.

They are: Jim Coombes, representing the County of Leduc, Ward 2; Grace Carstairs, Village of Warburg, Ward 6; and Walter Wynnyk, Village of Breton, Ward 5.

Returning to the board are Wallace Wilson representing the County of Wetaskiwin, Ward 4; Bruce Cropley, County of Leduc, Ward 1; and Tom Thurber, County of Wetaskiwin (citizen at large), Ward 3.

Minor improvements to the medical clinic have been initiated or completed.

Work has commenced on preparing a proposal for a nursing home or auxiliary hospital to be attached to the hospital.

Dr. S. Gill will be working at the Breton Hospital. Bill Dainard from the Alberta Hospital Association talked about hospital trusteeship and relationships between the board, medical staff and administration.

Lorna Carson, Anne Rose and Gene Begg were given plaques in recognition of their service on the Breton Hospital Board. Carson was given an additional gift to acknowledge her extra work and efforts.

The following staff and hospital trustees will be attending the AHA convention in Edmonton Nov. 26-28.

Trustees Tom Thurber, Wallace Wilson, Jim Coombes, Bruce Cropley and Walter Wynnyk. Staff include: Rod Ternier, administrator; Janet Young, business manager and Marilyn Dunn, director of nursing.

Nader to speak

Both Breton and Drayton Valley will be represented at the Alberta Hospital Association convention Nov. 26-28 in Edmonton.

Administrator Rod Ternier will head up the delegation from Breton while Jim Jansen, executive director at the Drayton Valley hospital will be one of four board members attending. The other three include chairman Arnold Jorgensen, vice chairman Henry Rondeau and board member Maurice McCullagh.

Ralph Nader, noted consumer advocate will provide the keynote address tomorrow (Wednesday). The minister of hospitals and medical care, Marvin Moore, will speak to the delegates on Thursday morning. It will be the first time Moore has spoken to this group.

Book outlines plan to win at the "money game"

By Peter Thibodeau

There are a number of reasons why so many people fail to become financially independent. Venita Van Caspel has outlined these reasons in her book, Money Dynamics for the New Economy. The following is a summary of her beliefs.

Procrastination

The greatest deterrent to becoming financially successful. Many fail to realize that time is such an important element. Compounding is one of the most powerful ways of making your money grow.

For example, a person aged 25 who saves $100 per month at a rate of return of 15 per cent would end up with $2,455,000 at age 65. Total invested would be $48,000. A person aged 45 who decides to play "catch-up" and starts saving $200 per month at a rate of 15 per cent till age 65 will also have invested $48,000, but will be worth on ly $282,744.

That's more than $2 million less, yet both save the same amount and had the same rate of return. Time made the difference.

Failure to establish a goal

Goals will give you a focus. You must establish both short- and long-term goals so you can plan your future. People don't plan to fail, they fail to plan.

Ignorance of what money must do to accomplish goals.

Many people fail to realize that a small difference in rate of return can make a considerable difference in how much you will accumulate over a period of time.

For example, an annual contribution of $5,500 invested at 14 per cent grows to $121,245 over 10 years versus just $58,050 for an investment yielding eight per cent over the same period.

Failure to learn our tax laws

You must learn to avoid paying taxes, defer your taxes, and choose your investment strategy to generate capital gains which can be realized tax free to a lifetime maximum of $500,000. Capital gains income is therefore much more preferable to interest income, which is taxable after the first $1,000.

Our investments must be thought of in "after-tax" dollars. For example, a five-year term deposit is currently paying about 10 per cent interest. If your taxable income for 1986 is $24,000, your marginal tax rate will be about 37 per cent.

After accounting for taxes, your after-tax rate of return on your term deposit will only be 6.3 per cent. If we take inflation into account, which is running at about 4.3 per cent (10-year average is about 8.0 per cent), our "real" rate of return on our 10 per cent term deposit is now two per cent.

Buying the wrong kind of life insurance.

You should buy term insurance rather than whole life insurance. Insurance salespersons will push their whole-life policies because premiums, and hence their commissions, will be higher.

Whole life can cost five times as much as term — about $160 a month for $150,000 of coverage at age 30 versus $30 a month for term. Put the difference you'll save into paying off your mortgage and other non-deductible debt or into good quality mutual funds generating capital gains.

Develop the right attitude

In order to win the "money game" you need to have a plan. Where you will be next year or five years from now will depend upon decisions you make today. So many of us are afraid to do anything so we leave our money in the bank where we are losing purchasing power due to inflation and taxation.

The other side of the coin are those people who gamble or speculate about the stock market by investing in penny stocks.

Speculation is risky and has resulted in many people losing in the market. Unless you are a sophisticated investor, let the professionals look after your money. Don't be concerned about costs in making your investments. Remember, nothing in this world comes free. The important factor is how much it will pay.

Warmer climates popular travel spots during winter

By Gary Loege

The temperature may be falling as fast as the snow lately, but it isn't giving area residents cold feet about travelling to warmer climates.

Local travel agencies reported several 'paradise' hot spots are drawing interest.

Bill Wallace of Crosswinds Travel said, "the most interesting places are Florida, Mexico, California and some Caribbean cruises. 'Of course there's always the old stand-bys for (Las) Vegas and Reno."

Ramona Treu of Meier Travel also reports several tropical trips being booked. "Hawaii, Mexico because of the (Canadian) dollar's value against the peso, and for shorter trips people are going to Vegas and Reno.

"There are a few people thinking about skiing because of all the snow, but most come in saying 'Send me somewhere warm."

"There seems to be a lot of interest in the Caribbean. A lot of them are saying they've been everywhere else. They shouldn't be afraid, we are," she said.

Pat Stables at Terra Travel said people want to go "somewhere warm and exotic.

"Hawaii seems to be the main destination. There's lots of people checking out the outer islands and they think it's great.

"Mexico is sometimes considered a bit of a culture shock, but the Canadians and Mexicans are developing a good holidaying relationship," she said.

"And if you travel to Mexico, Mexico style is actually quite cheap."

"Bill Wallace of Crosswinds agrees, but looks at it a different way.

"Yes, the Canadian dollar does go a long ways against the peso, but there's an old saying when it's 30 below, people tend to forget the 30 per cent exchange rate" to go south, he said.

Terra Travel is also expecting an increase in business to California in December because the state offers Maple Leaf month with discounts up to 20 per cent. "Which is close to the Canadian dollar's value," Stables explained.

"And there's always people going to Reno and Vegas on short jaunts to make sure the sun is still there," Stables added.

Saturday

Three are hurt in crash

Three people were hospitalized following a two-vehicle accident last Saturday.

Evansburg RCMP are still investigating the collision 12 miles south of Highway 16 on Highway 22 at about 6:45 p.m. Saturday.

Leslie Crothers and Darlene Tuttle, both of Drayton Valley, were taken to hospital and released. George Tzouanakis, of Evansburg, was treated for minor injuries and released the following day.

Madness winners

Roland Urkevich was the big winner in the recent Moonlight Madness shopping promotion. Urkevich won the $500 shopping spree at any of the 33 stores involved in the event. Five others — Donna Hutchinson, R. Smeland, Deanna Riley, Betty Bauman and Allan Wideman — won $100 shopping sprees. Pictured left, (l to r) Donna Hutchinson, Shirley Urkevich (wife of $500 winner Roland) and Allan Wideman. The remaining winners were unavailable for photos. The winners were presented their certificates by Rick Fallis from The Bay.

Seniors Christmas supper Dec. 7

By LeOpal Larson
398-2122

Sympathy is extended to the family and friends on the death of Scotty McKenzie of Rimbey Nov. 16. He was a former, well-known resident of Winfield.

Card parties are held every two weeks in the Drop-In Centre and are open to anyone who enjoys playing whist. On Nov. 5 Fred Drader won men's high; Bill Richmond, low; Margeurite King, ladies' high; Mary Richmond, low.

Buck Lake News

The senior citizens held their meeting Nov. 13. The main item on the agenda was the organization of the senior citizens and ladies' club supper for seniors of the area. The pot-luck supper will be held Sunday, Dec. 7 at 6:30 p.m. All residents over 50 years of age are invited. Mary Richmond, Kathleen Kiss, Minnie Oberg, Delores Lazo and Bert Hovde are in charge and can be contacted for further information.

The senior citizens report they have received the final payment from the estate of Vic Carlson.

Bob Rivers visited his brother Eddie and mother, Gladys in Rimbey recently.

Rudy Brzus, Chuck Parker and Lars Larson attended a United Farmers of Alberta meeting in Calgary Nov. 14.

OIL WIVES

President blindfolded, sentenced

By Virginia Kuzek

No one is above the law, regardless of importance, or so the conventioners claimed.

Thus it was that Peggy Metcalfe, elected to her fifth consecutive term on the Association of Oil Wives clubs' executive and in her 24th year as a member of the Drayton Valley Oil Wives, was brought to trial before her peers.

Blindfolded and indignant, Peggy pleaded not guilty to charges of conspiring with the enemy (Beaumont Oil Wives) in the alleged kidnapping of a fellow Drayton Valley member (the mascot) at the recent Lethbridge convention.

She was found guilty and sentenced to a term of serving refreshments to the members offended.

Other accounts of the convention were relayed and an ode sung to the Drayton Valley president. The song told of the astonishing number of pairs of shoes toted by our president for a three-day event.

A craft sale was also a part of the November meeting. Ten tables of floral arrangements, brass gifts, children's toys and a variety of handcrafted items enticed the Oil Wives to Christmas shopping.

A special meal with Italian flair was served by the Easyford ladies to complete the night.

Building a pipeline to the future

1975 saw the birth of a dream.

The dream of a company which would encourage Albertans to invest in their province's natural resources.

That dream has travelled an exciting road to reality. And, along the way, Alberta Energy Company Ltd. has created employment for thousands of Albertans.

- Building Alberta's highest volume oil pipeline system
- Developing one of Canada's largest natural gas fields
- Playing a major role in securing Canada's future oil supplies

- Turning Alberta's timber into products for Canadian and international markets
- Converting petrochemical by-products into fertilizer for Canada's farmers
- And providing coal for Canadian and international markets.

Alberta Energy Company is owned entirely by Canadians, including 40,000 Albertans, who share a resourceful vision of the future.

The Western Review, Drayton Valley, Alta., Tuesday, November 25, 1986

Part two

Dipping and diving, the mission continues...

The Western Review hit a home run with a fish and wildlife helicopter patrol recently. This is the final part of the two-part series on the trip.

By Lorne Christensen
The back door of the helicopter swings open.

A cool draft fills the inside of the chopper.

Fish and wildlife officer Al Gibson leans in and grabs his ticket book.

"They're not carrying their tags!" he shouts. His words barely audible over the loud roar flooding in.

Outside, on the isolated outline, Gibson stands shivering with the hunters as he scrawls the $10 ticket out.

The orange-clad hunters stand out against the dark and light patterns of spruce, iced with snow. Gibson says 95 per cent of the hunters he has checked still wear the traditional orange or red, even though it isn't required.

"They'd be hard to see" from the air if they weren't wearing the bright colors, he explains.

Pilot Hank Bannister keeps the chopper idling while Gibson climbs back in. The hunters have already vanished into the dense cover of the bush. There they won't get blasted by whirling snow, when the chopper takes off.

Gibson secures his seat belt and head set as Bannister skillfully lifts the chopper off the ground, clearing the trees only inches from the blades.

"Depressing isn't it," Gibson says as they hit tree-top level. "Not too many guys out."

The chopper dips and dives. Each time Gibson fixes his binoculars on hunters or trucks below.

"Let's head north of 16," Gibson says, his voice mixed with static on the radio head set.

Bannister aims the chopper north, and the mission continues north of Highway 16.

Below, Highway 16 falls like a white ribbon through the trees. The cars seem like small specks, hardly moving. Off to the right the expanse of trees is suddenly broken by a large, white plain. "Chip Lake," Gibson says as they skirt the shore.

The tree cover has opened up now, as the chopper glides over the terrain.

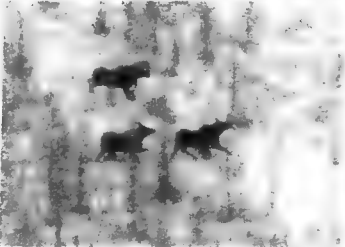

"Three moose on my right," Bannister says into the radio, as he dips sideways for a better view.

The moose, spooked by the chopper's noise frantically seek safer, if not quieter ground. Like ants they scurry across the tree-dotted muskeg.

"Two more over here; there's another one," Gibson says pointing to more moose below.

Al Gibson checks out three moose hanging near the remote cabin.

Three moose flee from the chopper's noise.

"Let's take a peek-a-boo"

The mission continues, the number of moose spotted now almost outnumber the hunters they've seen.

From the chopper's vantage point, the moose seem everywhere in the muskeg criss-crossed with cutlines. A spot of orange appears ahead. Gibson motions Bannister to set the bird down, while he checks the hunter. Gibson comes back to the chopper after a quick check.

"He hasn't seen anything yet," he laughs.

Only moments before,

from the sky, it appeared he was surrounded by moose.

"I guess they're easier to see from the air," Gibson chuckles as the chopper lifts off.

The time continues to tick away. Quickly the allotted hours are gone.

With the time almost up, Gibson and Bannister head back towards Carrot Creek, where they lifted off.

"Let's circle a cabin over there and see if they have any game hanging up," Gibson says on the way back.

The well-maintained log cabin is nestled in the trees beside an open field, somewhere north of Wildwood.

Lets take a peek-a-boo," Gibson says.

Gibson climbs into the chopper as the mission continues.

"This is a regular airport," Bannister jokes as he sets the chopper down in the open field, making reference to the narrow cutline he landed on before.

Near the cabin three gutted and skinned moose hung motionless, despite the breeze.

"Two bulls and one cow," Gibson says as he checks the animals for the proper tags. He makes a few notes and then climbs back in the chopper, headed for home.

Bannister sets the chopper down along the highway, where Gibson left his truck. The mission is over — the one in the air anyway.

The chopper is gone now, only the faint noise of its engine remains.

Gibson is frustrated by the "success" of the flight.

"It was quiet this afternoon," he says climbing into his truck. "Sometimes we pick some good stuff up," he adds.

"You can look at it another way," he says, "I'd rather go out and check guys all day long than write tickets."

Zahara voices concerns to county council

There should be little danger of Parkland county council lapsing into complacency come budget time.

Although former Division 3 candidate Greta Zahara lost in her bid to get on county council, she appeared at the last council meeting to tell elected officials of concerns she encountered while campaigning during the Oct. 20th municipal election.

In short, watch the dollars and cents.

In a two-page presentation to council, Zahara listed several county departments which she thought spent too much money.

The county should be keeping a closer eye on department expenditures, particularly the police, public works and planning department, she said.

For example, with the RCMP, the provincial highway patrol and the county, "Are their (County of Parkland Police) costs justified?"

And shouldn't the county be using more outside consultants rather than relying on in-house expertise for engineering and planning departments? With fewer property developments taking place, shouldn't the planning department look at reducing its staff?

"Ratepayers are tightening their belts, the county should do so too," Zahara said.

But there are some areas that would benefit from added dollars. "I feel more consideration should be given to fire protection in the county. Should anyone have a fire it's very difficult to put that fire out," unless access to water is gained.

More money should also be spent on ambulance services, she said.

Zahara also took issue with the county's surplus of $1.7 million. That is considerably larger than the year previous, and showed poor financial control, she said.

People in the county were suffering because of the poor economy and the county should adjust to the difficult economic times.

"Even though I was not elected I still feel I have some good concerns there."

Council voted to accept Zahara's comments as information.

Robinsons celebrate

By Alma Johnson
727-2312

The annual Halloween party at the hall was well attended. The haunted house was enjoyed by children of all ages as well as the parents.

Congratulations to Jim and Ethel Robinson who celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary Nov. 1. Their family hosted a dance and hot midnight supper at the hall.

Moon Lake News

Practice sessions for the youngsters are being held at the hall for the annual Christmas concert which takes place Dec. 14 at 1 p.m.

Stan and Margaret Woloszyn attended the 25th wedding anniversary celebration for John and Louise Mikulin held at Drayton Valley Nov. 8.

Norm and Alma Johnson spent a weekend visiting their son Ralph and Colleen Johnson and boys at Lloydminster. While there, they looked at the cattle in for the round-up show held at the Stockade.

Lanny and Donna Regamy and family of Spruce Grove were visitors at the Stan Woloszyn and Glenn Johnson homes.

Glenn Johnson and George Cherrington exhibited cattle at Farmfair '86 at the agrium in Edmonton.

The Cherrington family attended the Blonde de Aquilone cattle show Nov. 13 in Edmonton.

Crucial year for funding - Dobbin

The Parkland chapter of the Association for Bright Children will focus its efforts this year on establishing acceptable programs for gifted students in county schools.

The report of consultants, hired by the county education system to study the feasibility of implementing programs for talented students, has already been presented to the board of education in rough draft form.

This will be a crucial year for funding of such programs, president Martha Dobbin told members at ABC Parkland's annual meeting.

"We want programs teachers can live with, we can live with and that will benefit children," she said.

Ideally, programs for the gifted should challenge students by deleting reviews of material they're already familiar with and compacting the presentation of new material.

The curriculum should be augmented and supplemented by projects of interest to the students.

Programs implemented in county schools may initially be a long way from the ideal but "we will keep working toward it," Dobbin promised.

She urged members to speak to school trustees about the issue of gifted education and indicated ABC Parkland plans to make a presentation to the board of education when the consultants deliver their final report.

Plans are underway for a fall workshop for parents, educators and other concerned citizens interested in the needs of gifted children.

ABC Parkland has drawn up a list of resources available to parents who wish to have their children tested.

"We're not saying every child should be tested," Dobbin said. "If you don't know (the level of ability) you're dealing with, tests can be valuable."

Test scores can be used as a basis for discussing a child's strengths and weaknesses with professionals and can help parents understand their children and approach educators with more confidence.

Parents should be considered partners in the education system, she said.

During its first full year of operation, ABC Parkland "experienced an increase in memberships, an increase in awareness of the needs of gifted children and established a working relationship with educators."

The focus of the first year was to develop a realization of the importance of the needs of the gifted and the value of advocating on their behalf.

"If we don't do it as their parents, why should anyone else bother?"

Articles on topics such as the characteristics of gifted children, parenting and testing were compiled and made available to members.

The local chapter participated in a playwriting contest and attempted to get the resulting plays produced or recognized in some way.

Children's programs were organized and about a dozen children from ABC Parkland attended the Red Deer Summer Enrichment Program.

The executive for the coming year includes Dobbin as president; Sherry Regamy, vice-president; Linda Davidson, secretary; Judy Chaffee, treasurer; Jane Parkinson, in charge of membership; Diane Guina, publicity; Janis Shaw, publications; Pat Hase, children's programs; Diane Keller and Marie Gervais, conference committee; Alice Hendry and Martha Dobbin, education committee.

Council News

Heather Dykes has joined the town staff as secretary.

The town plans to meet with the County of Parkland Dec. 4 to discuss the joint general municipal plan.

The Eldorado Parent-Teachers Association has asked the transportation committee to look at the poor visibility at the southwest corner of 50 Ave. and 50 St. The matter will be dealt with in the town's new traffic study.

Following on the heels of a request from the Hillcrest Condominium Association, the town is looking into relocating the street light on 54 St. south of 45 Ave.

The town will look at installing a new sidewalk along 47 Ave. by the Elementary B school next year at an estimated cost of $6,500. The project has been delayed until present construction at the school is finished.

Collapsed sewer pipes in the southeast end of town between Aug. 1 and Sept. 30 cost the town $107,000. The money was taken from the water and sewer reserve.

The town has received four claims from residents affected by a June 15 sewer backup. Before making any decisions, council wants to meet with their insurance company.

Town council was scheduled to meet with the consultants today (Tuesday) and discuss the traffic study.

Trustees approve fees

The County of Parkland Board of Education has reaffirmed its decision to collect cross boundary busing fees this year.

Trustees recently ratified the action of school system administrators in turning down a request that fees not apply in the case of a particular family.

Superintendent of Schools Marv Tkachuk pointed out he had no grounds to waive the fees.

Each year the board discusses the wisdom of its policy covering collection of cross boundary fees (there's been some suggestion the fees are more trouble than they're worth, since they don't bring in a great deal of revenue) but each year the board reaffirms its policy.

Trustees approved the 1988-87 fee schedule in January, with no suggestion the policy will be subject to appeal.

Deputy superintendent John Arnot said he and Richard McCullough, head of the county's transportation department, are looking at all policies covering busing and will bring forward a recommendation to the board in February.

A series of meetings will be held at different locations throughout the county this winter to provide an opportunity for an expression of public concern before the recommendations are drawn up, he said.

Olympic tickets

Bigwigs "butting in at head of the line"

It's appalling that bigshots are going to get half the tickets for top Calgary Olympic events, leaving the public out in the cold.

Those tickets are to be set aside for those with clout: governments, corporate sponsors, Olympic bigwigs, and yes, the media.

Overall, the big guys could snare about one-quarter of the most popular tickets, about 425,000 seats, admit Calgary Olympic spokesmen. Half the seats at important opening and closing ceremonies, hockey games and figure skating competitions will be gone before people from around the world send in their ticket application forms.

About 60,000 of those forms have already arrived in Calgary. The applicants don't know they're competing for 8,200 seats for medal-round hockey and figure skating, or 2,000 for speed skating finals. The rest are going to the in-crowd.

Believe it or not, the allotment of half the tickets to the select few is considered the limit. They would have taken more, given the chance.

It's a rotten deal, and the organizing committee should abandon it immediately. Olympic Games are supposed to be for the athletes first, and the people of the world second. That's why Canadians are excited, and involved.

Politicians, corporate sponsors and sport bureaucrats should come somewhere after. Instead, they're butting in at the head of the line.

A reasonable reserved ticket limit would be 15 per cent of the total for any event, or about 2,400 for hockey. Leave the Games to the people who are supporting them, and paying for them.

The Olympic committee will need support in controlling the outburst of greed. Corporate sponsors should assure the public they're not expecting bags of tickets as part of the price for supporting the Olympics. The Alberta and federal governments should promise that they won't need more than four or five tickets each to the big events.

The people of Alberta didn't get behind the Olympics to put on a semi-private show for a bunch of politicians, corporate bigshots and bureaucrats.

Party plans

It's party time — almost.

Actually, the party's not until Feb. 7, 1987, but plans for Drayton Valley's 30th birthday are already underway, says Chamber of Commerce president Marty Prentice.

And in conjunction with the town's birthday, the local Lions Club has scheduled their 30th charter celebration for the following weekend (Feb. 14) "to tie in with the town's party," says Larry Poffenroth.

Both groups will be inviting "people involved in Drayton Valley over the past 30 years along with provincial and federal dignitaries," says Prentice.

Volunteer nominations

Do you know someone in your community who should be recognized for their outstanding dedication as a volunteer?

If so, they can be nominated for the Canada Volunteer Award, which is presented annually by Health and Welfare Canada to Canadians who have made a significant voluntary contribution to their community.

The deadline for nominations is Dec. 1.

For nomination forms contact the communications office of Health and Welfare in Edmonton, 420-2758.

Double winners

The Drayton Valley 4-H Beef club held their awards night recently.

Tanya Sekura and Allison Hunter were double winners. Sekura won the club championship and senior judging awards while Hunter captured the award for the highest general efficiency and a silver platter for the best kept records. Kenny MacKenzie won senior showmanship and Matthew Hunter won the junior showmanship award.

Colleen Sekura, a former 4-H alumni, was the guest speaker. She spoke on the advantages of being in 4-H as a young girl and the benefits to her as a wife of a farmer.

Members, buyers, sponsors and families attended a delicious supper at the Rocky Rapids Hall.

Jodi Gagnon has new mobility with a special modified van.

Jodi takes to the road in new van

By Bill Ingles

Warburg-area resident Jodi Gagnon has additional mobility thanks to modifications performed on her van.

Jodi is disabled and the modified van with lift and electric door allows her additional independence.

Hand controls and no driver's seat mean she can drive from her wheelchair. The van floor was also lowered four inches to allow clearance.

A remote control system operates the lift and door with several switches.

The process of getting a van and having it modified has opened new doors for Jodi.

"My family and grandparents got together to buy me a car and I traded the car for a van. Then I applied to have a lift put into the van. My counsellor, Abigail Parrish-Craig at the paraplegic association told me how to go about getting it.

"If it hadn't been for them I wouldn't have known about any of this. We sent the van to a place in Edmonton where they did the modifications. It came to over $5,000," she said.

The cost of the lift was covered by Associated Canadian Travellers, with funds raised at the annual ACT Telethon.

"It was kind of a shock. I wouldn't have had a lift in my van for a few years. I'd seen the telethons before but I never knew what they did with the money. This is the newest kind of lift for vans," she said.

The van has meant new freedom to do a variety of things. Regular trips to Edmonton have made Jodi especially aware of abuse of parking spaces set aside for the disabled.

"My boyfriend Darryl and I were at West Edmonton Mall and about to pull into a parking space when two blonde girls in a sports car whipped into a marked parking place and walked away. We contacted a security guard but he couldn't do anything. That really made me mad," she said.

Warburg has few facilities for disabled people, says Jodi, with rows of steps leading to most businesses.

If businesses aren't always accessible, the school in Warburg was readily available.

"The school was just great. Teachers juggled their schedules so that I wouldn't have to go upstairs. Before I came into Grade 7 they had everything set up.

"When I was playing floor hockey they always wanted me to be goalie. I would sit sideways in net and no pucks would get in," she said. Jodi graduated Warburg high school in 1985 and now works at the Breton Veterinary clinic while planning her future.

Mail order problems

So many things begin in the autumn — the kids go back to school, adults enroll in evening classes, theatre and opera return to fill those dark and cool evenings.

It seems, though, that it is really too early to start thinking about Christmas. But it probably isn't too early for the mail-order companies, and your mailbox will soon be filled with flyers and catalogues advertising the latest mail-order treasures for the Christmas season.

Those mail-order products can look very tempting, and reputable mail-order companies deliver what you order, at the correct price and on time.

However, there are also disreputable mail-order companies, and some of the complaints against them include long delays, shoddy merchandise and incorrect items being sent.

All mail-order companies operating in Alberta or receiving mail orders through an Alberta address must be licensed and bonded. You can get license information about a particular company by contacting the nearest office of Alberta Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

You should be aware that if you have a complaint against a mail-order company located outside the province, it may be difficult and expensive to recover any losses. Precautions

Take some precautions if you choose to shop by mail this Christmas. Here are some tips:

- Shop around. Is the item you want available at a local store which you know and trust?
- Choose the mail-order company with care. Consider the recommendations of friends and neighbors.

- If possible, consider ordering C.O.D.

• Don't be tricked into paying for unsolicited goods. Refuse them, tell the firm where to pick them up, or return them.

• Don't assume that an advertisement in a reputable magazine is always legitimate.

• Your signature on a record or book club coupon may make it a binding contract. Be sure to read and understand the contract before you sign, and keep a copy.

• Examine the merchandise as soon as you receive it. Notify the company immediately if you have received incorrect or damaged goods. Failure to do so can remove the seller's obligation to replace or repair the goods.

If you find it necessary to lodge a complaint against a mail-order business, write to the company. Explain the problem and exactly what you want done about it. You may also wish to send a copy of the letter to the Canadian Direct Marketing Association, 201 Consumers' Road, Suite 205, Willowdale, Ontario M2J 4G8.

If you still cannot resolve your difficulty or if you think the representation made by the company was deceiving or misleading, contact the nearest regional office of Alberta Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Ask for the publications, Unfair Trade Practices and Mail-Order Buying. Call 427-5782 or write Box 1616, Edmonton, Alberta T5J 2N8.

A final note about shopping by mail for Christmas, keep in mind there are deadlines for mailing parcels and letters out of the country. So if you are going to order a gift for your cousin in Tasmania, you'd better do it early.

Striving for public awareness

By Gary Logic
Cancer can be beaten. Sandra Bioletti and Deb

Walker are living proof. Having beaten the number two killer of Canadians, they are now in the business of helping others overcome their fears and are promoting awareness of the disease.

They're trying to do this through Cansurmount, a one-to-one support system for cancer patients and their families.

But much to their disappointment the system, which started last spring, has met with a cool reception in Drayton Valley.

This is because people have such a fear of the disease they say.

"We know people who have cancer, but don't even want to say the word. Which is too bad because it's something they have to live with and come to grips with."

"We've been through it ourselves. We know what it's like and can relate our own experiences. It's a lot easier with someone who has been through it already," said Walker.

"We're a support group. We don't give advice, we're just there to listen," she continued.

Bioletti agrees.

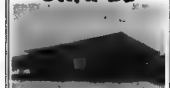

"We're striving for public awareness. I've lived with it for 10 years, but the recent cases think they're going to die when really there's lots of us leading very productive lives," she said.

Both agree "not knowing is worse than getting in there and facing it because facing up to it gives you a big advantage to beating it."

Anyone interested in helping or looking for support can call Debbie at 512-6212 or Sandra at 512-3893.

Four outdoor rinks are being planned in Drayton Valley according to the town's recreation director.

Rinks will be flooded at Eldorado and St. Anthony schools along with Mackenzie Park and Park Place, says Calvin Bennfield.

Three of the four will be "snowbank rinks" while the fourth, at Mackenzie Park will have boards. Bennfield said they will be flooding the basketball court at the park and putting reusable boards around it.

Horst Boehm feels the heat from a Thermotex.

System saves money

Saving money.

Two words which mean a lot to most people. And two words which imply the reasons many people are looking for new ways of heating.

Horst Boehm, owner of H&B Plumbing, is one of those people who has found a way to save money on the heating bills.

Using the Thermotex Radiant Heating system savings can pile up quickly.

The heater is installed on the ceiling to help circulate more warm air.

And it works.

Average homes can reduce heating bills by one-third using the Thermotex method over the conventional natural gas heating. Figures show an average 1,200-square-foot home costs about $621 a winter to heat. With the thermotex system costs are dropped to $576. The savings are even greater when compared to electric heat.

Electricity to heat a 1,200-square-foot home on the basis of 4.4 cents per kilowatt hour will run as high as $1,013 for a winter. Almost double the thermotex cost. "Here we pay more (than 4.4 cents)," says Boehm, who is marketing the system.

On a similar home using oil to heat, the cost runs at $850.

"The savings increase if the house is larger (than 1,200 square feet)," Boehm explained.

He called Thermotex a good thing to use for a "second heating" system.

"It's very safe and has a real saving," he added.

Businessman developing photo cells

Horst Boehm is waiting. Waiting for government support on a project to develop photo cells.

Boehm, owner of H&B Plumbing, says he hopes to begin producing photo cells "if the government helps."

"It's a big 'if,'" he added.

The type of photo cells Boehm is interested in developing are already being produced in Germany. He says with the co-operation of the Alberta and German governments and the company in Germany, he is hoping to "work on developing the stuff here."

The photo cells Boehm is talking about are 20 times more efficient than conventional photo cells which only last about four years.

"Japan is already using them in airplanes," he adds.

Applications for the new photo cells also vary more than the conventional cells. They can be used for anything from powering pumps to signals to lights in communication centres.

"They don't need much sunshine; on a cloudy day they have 60 per cent efficiency," Boehm explained.

So far the idea has met "favorable" reaction from the provincial government.

Part of their reaction comes from the idea of solar power "catching on more and more."

The photo cells involve direct conversion from solar energy to electricity and can be used with a conventional power system.

Boehm says one situation could see people using the photo cells and switching back to regular power supplies giving the collecting batteries "a chance to load up."

"You can still switch back to regular power,"

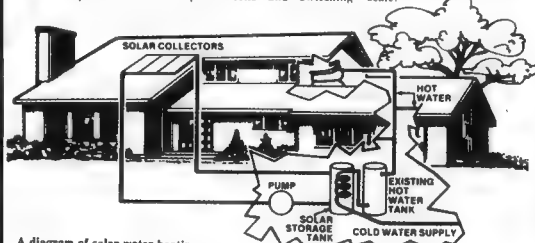

For now Boehm is waiting patiently for the government to decide and in the meantime still collecting information.

"I'd like to get more technology next year and from there really jump in," he said.

Boehm's answer to collecting more information and technology has already taken a big step with his "contacts" in Germany.

"I've already made the connections," he added.

Boehm says if the government doesn't help with the project he will probably pursue it, only on a smaller scale.

A diagram of solar water heating.

Solar heat is catching on

It's time to get yourself into hot water.

Hot water, the solar heating way.

Solar heating can save up to 70 per cent on hot water heating costs according to one report.

And the system is becoming popular in this area. Horst Boehm, from H&B Plumbing, pointed out he installed about 20 units over the last year for solar-heated hot water. The reduction in the costs can pay for the system in as little as seven years.

The system works by collectors positioned on a roof or surface facing the sun. They receive the heat from the sun and transfer it into a fluid passing through copper tubes. From there the heated fluid is circulated to a solar storage tank for when it's needed.

The household water is then heated by the cold fresh water passing through a copper coil in the solar storage tank. The preheated water then goes to your existing hot water tank and if the temperature is below the desired setting the water heater uses its normal gas, electricity or oil to finish the heating.

"It's good and it works," Boehm said.

Want to Save Money & Conserve Energy?

Here are some ways to do just that . . .

At last...an energy-efficient easy-to-install gas water heater for multi-unit buildings.

Contained Combustion Direct-Vent Through-the-wall Gas Water Heater

Here's how it works

- 1 Outside air enters, through the vent system's outer channel. The air is needed to fuel the combustion process.
- 2 Air flows down, through a manageway between the inner and outer jacket. The inner jacket surrounds the tank and by means of insulation.
- 3 Air enters the combustion chamber, where it mixes with gas. The gas mixture is ignited, and heats the water inside the tank.
- 4 Rising through the floor tube, the hot products of combustion continue to heat water in the tank. A central flue inside the tank permits maximum transfer of heat, before the products of combustion leave the flue.
- 5 Exhausts through dual-chambered vents, the products of combustion are expelled horizontally into the outside air through the vent system's inner channel.

State file a need...

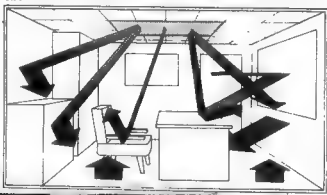

Until now, architects and builders have hesitated to include more economical gas water heaters in multi-unit, multi-story apartment and condominium buildings, as well as in some schools, airports and other complex residential applications. To do so required complex, costly multiple venting systems to vent the products of combustion through the roof of the building. But State's new Turbo Super-Saver Contained Combustion gas water heater can be easily installed in an apartment closet or utility space, and features a dual-chambered contained combustion vent system that vents horizontally, directly through the building wall. Because of the through-the-wall design, the availability and lower cost of gas water heating compared to electric make the building more attractive to prospective renters or buyers.

HEATING OF THE FUTURE - TODAY

From its first 70's construction, today's home offers just one thing: energy efficiency. Energy efficiency is a term which has many meanings, but in the context of home heating, it means the use of energy in the most efficient way possible. The most efficient way to heat a home is by using a radiant heat system. Radiant heat systems are the most efficient way to heat a home, and they are the most efficient way to heat a home.

THE ADVANTAGES OF RADIANT HEAT

Radiant heat systems have been used for centuries, but only recently have they become a practical reality. Today, radiant heat systems are the most efficient way to heat a home, and they are the most efficient way to heat a home. Radiant heat systems are the most efficient way to heat a home, and they are the most efficient way to heat a home.

PREVENTS SEWER BACKUPS

fiovalve FR4
THE ULTIMATE BACK-WATER VALVE
AUTOMATICALLY BALANCED SEWER VALVE WITH FLIGHT CLOSURE

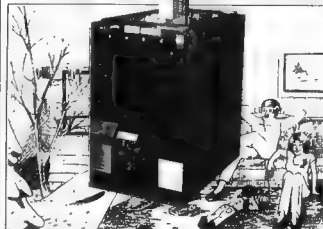

The FIOVALVE is a normally open automatic back-water valve which permits the free circulation of air throughout the plumbing system. It will close automatically when sewer back-up occurs, thus isolating the entire house or building from sewage back-flow.

FIOVALVE has been approved by CSA and Plumbing Authorities. The FIOVALVE, due to its design, is installed in the building drain and complies with all Plumbing regulated codes.

May be installed in any sewer line, septic system, and non-backsiphon (P-trap or bell trap).

Comes complete with battery operated alarm buzzer

Seminar on energy-efficient new-home construction

Remember the house that Jack built in the nursery rhyme?

It probably wasn't very energy-efficient — but it could have been if Jack had attended the province's Energy Conservation Branch seminar on energy-efficient new home construction.

The payoff for using the principles and techniques outlined in the seminar can be substantial over the life of a house, says Don Wharton, director of public information for the branch.

The cost of energy in an average, 1,200-square-foot Alberta bungalow was approximately $1,100 last year. That brought about 2,000 gigajoules of energy in the form of natural gas, electricity and other sources.

This consumption can easily be cut to approximately 76 gigajoules if a home is built to energy-efficient standards. The additional construction cost runs between $1,000 and $5,000, but the homeowner can achieve energy savings of $200 to $400 a year, paying back the original investment in eight to 10 years.

Saving fuel costs isn't the only reason for building an energy-efficient home, Wharton stresses. There are other motivators, notably the fact that a draft-free home is more comfortable.

"You can't put a dollar value on increased comfort," he says.

The energy-efficient new home construction seminar joins the Energy Conservation Branch's range of workshops on various aspects of energy conservation. It was developed in response to the need for in-depth, technical information.

"It's designed for owners-builders or keen homeowners who would be interested in close supervision of a contractor," says Wharton. "It could also be interesting to any builders who aren't experienced in energy-efficient construction."

A team of seminar leaders throughout the province are available to present the session at the request of educational institutions or community groups who sponsor the seminar by providing a location and recruiting participants.

Using slides and overhead transparencies, the seminar leaders outline how energy is lost and how construction techniques can keep that loss down.

"We try to give participants an idea of the best places to put their money," says Wharton. "Some investments give you a better return in energy savings than others."

Much of the energy savings that can be achieved lie in reduced space heating requirements. About one-third of heat is lost via air leakage through windows, electrical outlets, chimneys and other gaps that allow cold air to enter. The remaining two-thirds is lost by heat transfer through the solid components of the home, such as basement walls or the ceiling.

The seminar gets down to the nitty-gritty of construction techniques: how to install a bathroom vent or a plumbing stack to avoid leakage; what kinds of insulation to use for specific purposes; how to insulate a wood foundation.

For example, they outline the steps in double-wall construction, which employs an interior and an exterior wall with a plywood plate at the top and bottom filled with insulation to achieve very high R-values. The construction of specialized trusses, the steps in insulating a cathedral ceiling, and the selection of energy-efficient windows are some of the other subjects on the agenda.

The seminar is designed to last about two hours, with question-and-answer opportunities so that participants can discuss problems that are of particular interest to them.

Jack would no doubt consider it two hours well spent.

More energy saving hints

- Clean lamps regularly as dust and dirt build up can reduce light output by up to 40 per cent.
- Paint interior walls light colors to increase the amount of light reflected.
- Use time switches and photocells to closely regulate the lighting and minimize energy waste.
- Switch off lights when not in use for:
  - incandescent — any length of time
  - fluorescent — more than 5 minutes
  - mercury vapor — more than 5 minutes
  - metal halide — more than 30 minutes.

high pressure sodium — more than 30 minutes.

PROpane PROPANE

WHY CONVERT YOUR GASOLINE FUEL TO ICG AUTO-PROPANE?

- 1. LESS COSTLY
Taking the basic product itself and assuming roughly equal mileage per gallon, the saving in fuel could be up to 50% per gallon over gasoline.
- 2. MORE PLENTIFUL
The supply of propane in Canada is excellent, and will continue to be for the foreseeable future. This fact, together with the extensive network of fuel outlets in operation and planned by ICG, will ensure fleet operators of an uninterrupted flow of ICG AUTO-PROPANE.
- 3. CUTS DOWN MAINTENANCE
With ICG AUTO-PROPANE, spark plug life is extended up to three times that of normal life on gasoline. The interval between oil changes is increased because there is no gasoline to dilute the crankcase oil, and there is no carburetor to clean periodically.
- 4. MORE EFFICIENT
Because ICG AUTO-PROPANE has better combustion properties than gasoline, it burns cleaner and more completely, burning more of its molecules into power and less into residue that fouls the air and the engine.
- 5. LONGER ENGINE LIFE
For those and other reasons the engine life of your fleet is extended; you get more work from your engines over a longer period of time, which enhances your original investment. Also, since there are fewer parts to service (no fuel pump, for example) there is less downtime due to overhauling and servicing.

Any one of these advantages is a reason enough to consider converting to ICG AUTO-PROPANE. When you put them all together, the increased efficiency and profitability of ICG AUTO-PROPANE for your fleet becomes obvious.

New generation of windows now on the market

We expect a lot from our windows.

Year-round they admit light and solar heat to the home while keeping heat loss and condensation to a minimum.

They open for ventilation in summer yet must seal tightly against rain and winter air leakage. The best buy, when renovating your existing home or building a new one, will be a window that does all these things and more.

A new generation of window is on the market. Recent developments in the glass and plastics industries have produced window systems equal or superior in insulating value to the best triple pane windows. In addition, they weigh less and reduce some of the fabricating ultraviolet light in sunlight.

One such product is referred to as a suspended-film window.

These units have two panes of glass with a third layer of thin, specially treated transparent plastic suspended in between. The plastic is, except on close inspection, invisible, yet it can dramatically improve the window's energy efficiency. One type of film creates an insulating value similar to triple pane windows but allows more solar radiation to pass through — good for homes that rely heavily on solar heating through south windows.

Another type of film improves the insulating value of triple pane windows by 30 to 40 per cent, but also reduces the amount of solar transmission. These windows are more appropriate for new, well-insulated homes or in renovations where reduced heat loss will result in a more comfortable environment near the window.

A second development in window technology is low emissivity for low-e glass. Emissivity simply means the power of radiating light or heat. In this case a thin, invisible coating of metal is deposited on one or both panes of a double pane window. Normally, most of the outside surface of the inside pane receives the treatment. This coating reduces the tendency of the inner pane to radiate room heat to the outside. Thus, the inner glass is warmer, heat loss is reduced and condensation is less likely to occur on cold winter nights. An added benefit is that low-e glass has the thickness of standard sealed double pane units and can easily replace them in renovation situations.

Both types of products are available in Alberta. If you are thinking of buying a new or replacement window for your home, look for a new booklet just published by the government of Alberta.

The booklet, entitled Windows, is part of an energy conservation series printed by the Energy Conservation Branch of Alberta Energy and Natural Resources. It is available from most hardware and building supply stores in Alberta, or by calling their ENERGY MATTERS hotline telephone service by dialing 0 and asking the operator for Zenith 23339; in Edmonton call 427-5300.

Good lighting needed

• It adds comfort by reducing eye-strain, a major cause of fatigue.

• It enhances the appearance of a home's interior and also emphasizes decorative features.

• It increases safety, both inside and outside the home. Good indoor lighting in halls, stairs and closets helps to prevent accidents. Switches should be located so lights can be switched on and off at each doorway.

Small night lights can be valuable in children's rooms and bathrooms.

Outdoor lighting on walkways and at entrances provides safety when walking, and serves to deter prowlers and burglars.

Energy check list

Lighting

- Switch off all lights when not in use.
- Use low wattage bulbs in non-work areas, such as hallways and closets.
- Consider installing fluorescent lamps, as they are more energy-efficient than incandescent bulbs of the same wattage.
- Keep bulbs and fixtures clean.

Timers

- Use a timer for your car block heater.
- Use timers to regulate lighting.

Heating/Insulation

- Reduce your thermostat setting at night, and when no one is at home.

- Make sure all doors have weather stripping, and that it is in good condition.

- Check to see that your insulation is up to present-day standards. Re-insulate where necessary.

- Install storm windows over single glazed windows, or consider replacing with double or triple glazed windows.

Appliances

- Freezer and refrigerators — defrost when frost build-up is over 6 mm (¼") thick.
- when purchasing, watch for the EnerGuide label.

- Dishwasher — operate only when you have a full load.

- Range — match pot size to element size.
- — cook entire meals in the oven.

- Portable appliances — use portable cooking appliances instead of your range whenever possible.

- Washer — wash full loads.
- Dryer — clean lint filter after every load.
- — don't overdry.

Now

Turning down heat will help keep utility bills down

"Gosh, we're spending a lot of money on utilities — we'd better start turning the heat down."

Certainly, utility costs have increased during the past decade, and in Alberta's climate we are accustomed to thinking of heating as our biggest home energy need. But other utilities take a big slice of the budgetary pie, so cutting back on space heating costs isn't the only way to keep utility costs from gobbling up more than their share of the household budget.

According to Goldie Edworthy of Alberta Energy and Natural Resources, Energy Conservation Branch, the average natural gas utility bill in Alberta is just under $600, of which 80 per cent, or about $480, went on space heating. The average electricity cost was just under $250 for the year and the average cost for water and sewer was about $140, making an average total utility cost of $990.

In other words, heating the average Edmonton home took less than half the money spent on utilities. The actual costs for other communities and rural areas in Alberta vary, but the general rationale is the same.

Obviously, turning down the heat — and increasing insulation levels — will help keep the bills down. But to make the most of possible savings, homeowners have to be aware of their utility use as a whole.

Some fairly simple conservation steps can result in savings of about 10 per cent a year on your electric costs. The refrigerator, for example, is the heaviest home energy consumer. It uses more than a fifth of the electricity used in the average home each month. There are a variety of ways to keep this consumption to a minimum.

These include such things as cooling hot foods before putting them in the fridge, keeping the door gasket clean and replacing it if it is not sealing tightly, and locating the fridge away from sources of heat like sunlight or the stove. Similar steps should be used to keep the costs down for freezers.

One basic principle in saving electricity is: don't make appliances work any harder than they have to.

For instance, keep furnace filters clean so that the fan (which uses about 13 per cent of the electricity energy in an average home) works most efficiently. Vacuum the dust off the condenser coils at the back of the fridge at least once a year. Keep the lint catcher in an electric dryer free from lint.

Another principle in saving electricity is, "don't use it when you don't need it."

That means turning off unnecessary lights or using timers on lights when the house is empty. It means not using a block heater to heat a car all night when three to four hours is sufficient. Once again, a timer can be used to save energy.

Homeowners are often not aware of how much they can save in water and sewage costs.

Of the 750 litres of water consumed in the typical household each day, 600 litres are used in the bathroom — half of which is used for toilet flushing.

One simple and effective way of saving on water utility costs is to install a toilet dam, which can reduce the amount of water needed for each flush by up to 50 per cent while maintaining the water level needed for a toilet to operate. This can translate in savings of about $36 per year.

Showering uses about 150 litres of water — and, more expensively, hot water — each day in the average home.

The most inexpensive way of reducing this is to install a flow restrictor in the existing shower head. Alternatively, the homeowner can install a new low-flow shower head that gives a more satisfying spray but uses only half the water consumed by a conventional shower head.

Altogether, there are hundreds of ways of saving energy in the home. Most call for a little common sense and thoughtfulness about when, where and why the energy is being used.

Taken as a whole, they help homeowners get a grip on utility costs.

For more information on these and other ways of saving energy, call the ENERGY MATTERS hotline of the Energy Conservation Branch by dialling 800 and asking for Zenith 22389 in Edmonton call 427-5300.

Heating system generally misunderstood

Although the heating system is an essential part of every home, it is generally not well understood by the average homeowner.

We tend to forget about it and fail to provide the small amount of maintenance necessary to ensure its safe and efficient operation.

No matter how well your system is maintained, one day the heating equipment will break down and have to be replaced. For the majority of homeowners in Alberta, this will mean the purchase of a new gas-fired forced-air furnace or hot water heater. As you shop around, you will discover that heaters have changed dramatically.

Although standard units are still available, they are being challenged by a line of new, higher-efficiency models. More than 20 medium- and high-efficiency furnaces have been introduced to Alberta and choosing will require careful consideration. Heating contractors will refer to induced draft furnaces, condensing furnaces and pulse combustion furnaces and the consumer must be knowledgeable about the choices available.

Higher-efficiency units are attractive because of their ability to reduce the size of your heating bill. But the technology is new and must be approached with caution. With medium-efficiency furnaces costing about $500 more than a conventional unit and high-efficiency units about $1,400 more, you should consider the cost-effectiveness of this higher investment. It is important to compare installation and operating costs, ease of maintenance, availability of parts and service warranties. The same considerations apply to the purchase of a higher-efficiency water heater or boiler.

To help you assess your present heating system and if necessary, help you choose new equipment that is both cost-efficient and energy efficient, the Energy Conservation Branch of Alberta Energy and Natural Resources has booklets entitled Selecting a Heating System and Heating System Maintenance.

If you would like free copies of these booklets or have questions regarding heating systems, call ENERGY MATTERS, Alberta's residential energy hotline, by dialling 800 and asking the operator for Zenith 22389. In Edmonton call 427-5300.

Energy-saving tips

- Your kettle will take longer to boil when hard water mineral deposits coat the element. Clean it regularly with vinegar and water.
- Boil only as much water as necessary. One cup of coffee requires only one cup of water.

Portable appliances can give greater energy savings when you use them carefully.

- Use the appliance best suited to the job. Portable cooking appliances use about half the wattage of an electric range.
- Keep portable cooking appliances out of drafts. They have a cooling effect on the surface and the thermostatic control must be on more often to maintain temperature.

- Turn off appliances as soon as you're finished with them and avoid long pre-heating periods.

- Keep your appliances in top working order at all times. It will have a longer life as well as being more energy-efficient.

- Cook a double batch in your frypan or slow cooker and freeze the extra for another time. You save two ways since your freezer operates most efficiently when it is at least three-quarters full.

Fresh air valve aids in furnace use

An automatic, motorized, outdoor air supply control valve (ACA PAC) may be the answer to your money and energy saving problems when it comes to winter heating.

A cold basement, high heating bills and a home noticeably cool before the furnace cuts in, may be due to the insulated pipe leading from the furnace area to an outside basement wall.

This pipe may inefficiently deliver cold fresh air from outside the home to the furnace for combustion. In many cases, homeowners have plugged this tube because of the undesirable cold air coming into the home when the furnace is not running. The furnace must then rely on stale air from within the home or air that is sucked through poorly fitted doors and windows or air that backdrafts down the chimney.

Propane, oil and gas-fired boilers and furnaces require fresh air to burn. Lack of air, when the fire burns, produces odorless, deadly carbon monoxide fumes. As a result, building safety codes now specify a separate outdoor air supply tube for combustion and that obstructing this tube is strictly prohibited.

This fresh air can now be safely and effectively controlled by the ACA PAC fitted to the terminating end of the outdoor air supply tube. This combustion air damper device is thermostatically interlocked to automatically open for appliance fire and to automatically close when fresh air is not required.

The ACA PAC is a fresh air control valve that can be easily mounted on the side of the furnace or boiler cabinet, a few inches above and beside the burner. It is connected to an insulated duct which travels through an outside wall and is protected with a hooded cap.

The ACA PAC is inter-connected to the safety control of the heating system. When the furnace thermostat or boiler aquastat requires heat, the damper automatically drops open to allow entry of fresh air for complete combustion. When the burner cuts out, the ACA PAC closes to save energy. Recently documented surveys, from independent engineers in Alberta, reveal an average fuel saving of 12 per cent.

Produced by Boyce Manufacturing Inc. of Camrose, Alberta, the ACA PAC has been approved by the Canadian Gas Association (CGA) and carries the CGA certification symbol. The ACA PAC has also been given the Product Listing by the Alberta Building Standards Branch and is recognized by the federal and provincial government, the Northwest Territories, as well as the American Gas Association, as an accepted device to control combustion air.

The Alberta government has made the ACA PAC compulsory in all new rural and native housing programs. Recently extended CGA approvals have now resulted in the ACA PAC being used in schools, apartment buildings and large commercial developments. The ACA PAC is patented in the United States and Canada with additional patents pending.

Energy tips

- The toaster oven is especially practical for single persons or small families for cooking small amounts of food.

- Use the toaster oven for warming buns, baking potatoes, broiling open-face sandwiches rather than using your range.

- When cooking dinner for a crowd, you may need the space of your conventional oven. Make the best use of your oven by preparing a complete oven meal. Select dishes which bake at the same temperatures.

Long life bulbs

A standard 100-watt bulb can be expected to last 750 to 1,000 hours and produce about 1,500 lumens in initially.

A "long-life" or "extended service" bulb of the same wattage will last 2,500 hours or more, but produce only 80 per cent or less light.

These bulbs are designed to operate at 130 volts, but household voltage is 120 volts. This causes bulbs to operate at a lower temperature, resulting in a longer bulb life. On a 60-watt bulb, the brightness reduces to that of a 40- to 50-watt bulb. There is a trade-off of reduced lumens for longer life, though both bulbs use the same amount of electricity.

In general, the standard 100-watt or 60-watt bulbs are the best to buy when brightness is more important than long life. In areas that are awkward to reach, e.g., stairwells, garage ceilings, cathedral ceilings, it is more practical to use an extended life bulb.

Bulbs can be clear, frosted or coated. Clear bulbs have no coating, produce a harsh glaring light and have a definite bright spot where the filament is visible. They are used mainly in decorative fixtures.

Frosted bulbs are chemically etched on the inside, giving a frosted appearance. This helps to soften and diffuse the light, though there still is some glare and a bright spot in the bulb.

Coated or shadow ban bulbs have a silica coating inside the glass, which produces a whiter light. The result is a very even diffusion of light.

Free booklets provide energy conservation tips

Alberta homeowners can receive a host of helpful information on ways to save money by controlling energy use in the popular 10-booklet Alberta Energy Savers series published by Alberta Energy and Natural Resources.

Each booklet is a concise summary of technical information on home energy conservation materials and procedures, written in an easy-to-read style and well illustrated. The series is continually revised as technology changes and new booklets are added as public demand for data heats up.

All 10 booklets are distributed free of charge in retail hardware and building supply outlets across the province. They also may be ordered through the Energy Conservation Branch. To receive copies, indicate the title desired and return to: Alberta Energy and Natural Resources, Energy Conservation Branch, 2nd Floor, Highfield Place, 10010-106 St., Edmonton, AB T5J 3L8.

Titles include: Basement Insulation, Caulking and Weathersripping, Heating System Maintenance, Selecting a Heating System, Attic Insulation, Condensation Concerns, Grants for Homeowners, Re-siding for Energy Conservation, Windows, Ventilating Your Home.

Be sure to include your complete mailing address.

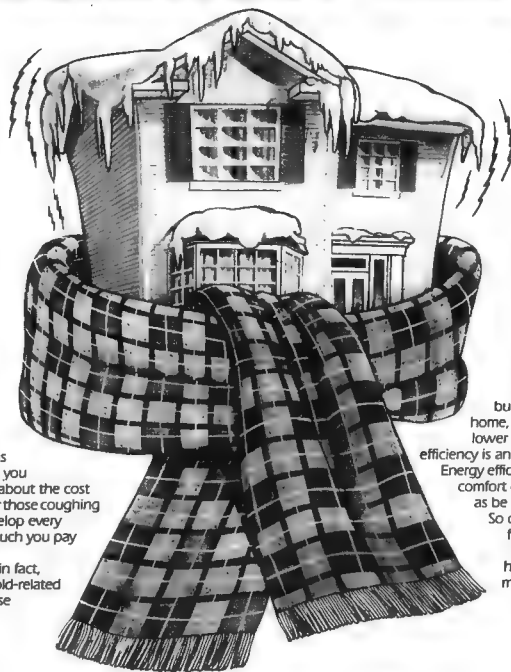

For answers to specific questions about your home, call the toll-free ENERGY MATTERS telephone inquiry service by dialing the operator, 0, and requesting Zenith 22339. Edmonton callers should dial 427-5300.

Energy tips

- Use the electric frypan whenever possible for cooking small amounts or specialized jobs, such as baking potatoes and warming buns. Less electricity is required to operate the frypan.

Finally... a Cure for the Common Cold.

Energy efficiency is a guaranteed cure for those chills you get with your electricity or gas bill, for those shivers you feel when you hear about the cost of heating oil, and for those coughing fits you seem to develop every time you see how much you pay for hot water.

Energy efficiency, in fact, cures almost every cold-related ail you and your house suffer from.

Next time you are building or renovating a home, remember, even with lower energy prices, energy efficiency is an excellent investment. Energy efficiency will improve the comfort of your home, as well as be financially rewarding. So don't suffer needlessly from the effects of the common cold. Proper home energy management and good energy habits will cure it every time!

Special envelopes can save money when mailing cards

Christmas card senders can save five cents a card under a program by Canada Post, according to the local postmaster.

Greeting cards can be mailed for 29 cents in special envelopes under the "Greet More" campaign.

Local postmaster Le-Roy Robinson said packages of 10 of the 29 cent stamps are available at the local post office. "They can save five cents a shot," he added.

The stamps are good until January 31, 1987 Robinson explained.

The reduced rate for greeting cards is just one idea the post office is pushing to make Christmas mailing easier.

Robinson says they also recommend packing parcels well with addresses written plainly. "It should be addressed clearly on two sides with the postal code," he said.

The post office itself is not hiring any more staff to handle the Christmas rush, he added. One job they will be working on is answering the Dear Santa Claus letters that come in.

Robinson says anyone sending a letter to Santa should address it to:

Santa Claus
North Pole,
Canada
HOH OHO

Robinson says they have already received about six letters to Santa Claus.

Deadlines for mailing cards have also been set. Cards mailed in town addresses should be sent by December 17 for first class and by December 15 for parcel post. Out of town first class mail is December 12 and December 8 for parcel post.

Christmas mail is already surfacing at the local post office.

For air mail going out of the country a reduced rate is also available on Christmas items. Unsealed cards can go for 51 cents, 17 cents less than the normal rate for sealed items under 20 grams.

Relations between Mexico and Alberta are growing

Alberta Associate Minister of Agriculture Shirley Cripps has announced the signing of two agreements in Guadalajara, Mexico which will have long-term benefits for agricultural producers in both Alberta and Mexico.

The associate minister said the agreements are a strong indication of the growing relationship between the two governments. Cripps stated, "I think the personal contact made on the trip was very important and is the key to the development of markets. It also illustrates that we are serious in developing a greater trade relationship with Mexico and that the Alberta government is behind the initiatives of the private sector."

The associate minister had just returned from the Mexican city where she and Mexican Agriculture Minister Eduardo Pesquera Olea signed a protocol agreement to facilitate trading between Mexico and Alberta.

Cripps was leading a delegation from the Alberta/Canada All Breeds Association (ACABA) and the Alberta Swine Breeders Association at a major livestock show in Guadalajara.

ACABA, a promotional organization for Alberta livestock, and the Alberta government have had a Alberta/Mexico Co-operation Agreement, is considered a protocol agreement setting out general areas of cooperation between the two governments. The other document is a working agreement between ACABA and the Cattlemen's Union of Guadalajara describing each group's responsibilities in a joint bull testing program.

The one document, the prize, import and export programs, and technical and cultural exchanges. It really provides for all kinds of opportunities.

A working committee including representatives from both governments has been

The associate minister said, "The protocol agreement provides for joint programs between Alberta and Mexico to be developed. This could include private enter-struck to determine the type of programs suitable under the agreement, including such commodities as canola and swine.

The bull testing program agreement covers on-farm demonstrations of 17 Alberta beef bulls, shipped to Mexico earlier this year.

Working with the Cattlemen's Union of Guadalajara, the Mexican government has distributed the bulls to selected ranches to be used in trial breeding programs with the native Brahma-type cattle of Mexico.

The program is being monitored to determine ease of calving, weights of calves, rate of gain and weaning weights. Successful results should lead to the increased sale of Alberta beef cattle breeding stock to Mexico.

Cripps said she is confident these agreements will provide the necessary opportunities to expand trade and she looks forward to the continuation of the excellent cooperation received to date.

Training trailer at Westerra

One of Alberta's most unique mobile classrooms is coming to Westerra Institute of Technology.

This "classroom", actually an 8x20 foot cylindrical tank mounted on a truck, is used to train people to save lives and prevent accidents in industry.

Originally designed and built by Lakeland College for instructing welding students in confined entry and H<sub>2</sub>S (hydrogen sulfide) safety, the classroom now serves similar needs for various other work situations.

Lakeland will bring the unit to Westerra in early December. Westerra's special projects coordinator Jim Weaver said,

"Right now, we're testing the waters, trying to see if anyone in this area is interested in the eight-hour course that's available. If there is sufficient interest, we'll offer it."

Specifically, the course consists of filling and maintenance of breathing equipment, general safety, permits, lockouts, venting and rescue, testing for toxic and combustible gases and oxygen levels, safe and efficient movement through manways, walkways, ladders, assembly inside tanks, rescue of an incapacitated worker, resuscitation procedures, stretchers, harnesses, winches, tripods and stressful situations involving air supply cut-off.

All training is done in side the tank, with breathing equipment worn at all times. With such a small space, enrolment is limited to only six students per day.

Anyone interested in the course is urged to contact either Jim Weaver or Lucille Stephenson in Westerra's Client Services Department, at 963-1000.

Specialty crops require special, intense management

By Gerald Laarhuis
With an extremely depressed cereal grain market many area farmers are looking to alternatives to the growing of traditional cereal crops.

Crops being considered include field peas, lentils, beans, millet, canary seed as well as several others. But should we be looking at specialty crops or does greater potential exist for growing similar crops and looking for alternate markets?

Growing specialty crops requires special and much more intense management. Investment in seed fertilizer and chemical usually exceeds that of conventional crops.

Specialty crops are much more susceptible to environmental and pest conditions.

For most special crops the most serious limitation in this area is the shortness of our growing season. While the opportunity to contract a price for the production exists, the prices in general fluctuate unpredictably. Still, for the right producer under the right conditions, production of specialty crops can be very profitable.

Realizing the serious limitations to growing specialty crops in this district many producers are looking to grow cereal for seed or malting. The premiums paid for seed or malting grains can make cereal or forage production a profitable enterprise. However, there are several considerations a farmer must make prior to committing land to the production of malting barley or seed grains.

Availability and ease of marketing must be considered. If farmers can't sell the product for a premium price why go through additional effort and expense? Growing malting barley requires careful selection of variety. Many Alberta farmers plant malting varieties in hope of selling at least part of the crop for malting. Consequently, 80 per cent of all barley acreage is planted to varieties acceptable for malting, while only 10 per cent of the barley crop is marketed as malted barley. While many two- and six-row barleys are eligible for malting, the variety Klages claims the majority of the market. Klages is a late maturing variety. Because malting grain must be relatively low in protein and high in carbohydrates, fertilizing requires special consideration.

Planning to grow pedigreed seed requires action now. Production of pedigreed seed is necessarily highly regulated. Several applications and deadlines must be met, some of which are coming up in December if you want to grow and sell pedigreed seed in 1987. If you are thinking about producing pedigreed seed start investigating the several requirements and conditions now — waiting until spring could delay your plans for another year.

Growing specialty crops or using alternate marketing methods of conventional crops will not suit everyone. The more intense an enterprise is managed the greater the potential for profit, but the potential of risk of failure is also much greater.

Christmas tree hints.....

One of the many Christmas traditions is having the whole family get together to participate in cutting the Christmas tree.

However, if your family is unable to this year but you still want a real tree, an alternative is to buy one. Here are a few things to consider before buying your Christmas tree:

- Be sure you know the height of your ceiling and the width of the area in which you will display your tree.

- Choose a space away from heat sources such as radiators, heating ducts and fireplaces. Also be careful not to block exits and to stay away from drapes, not only for fire precautions but tap is very sticky!

- Perhaps you should measure the tree before you buy it. It will look smaller on a large lot. Also, a tree with imperfections may cost less and if you've chosen a corner location the "bare" spot won't show!

- Test the needles for freshness. When needles are bent back, fresh needles will spring back, dry needles will break. Firs and pines usually retain their needles longer than spruce. Does the tree have a healthy, green color and fragrant odor?

- Free the tree of dead needles by holding the tree by the trunk and banging the stump on the ground. It's natural for some needles to fall but if they still fall after two or three bumps, don't buy it. The tree isn't very fresh.

- Touch the stump. Usually it will be wet and sticky if the tree is fresh.

You may be wondering why there seems to be varying prices for Christmas trees. Price depends on these things: kind of tree, size, quality, how long it took to grow, where it was grown (how far away was it imported?).

Keeping tree fresh and safe. As soon as possible after purchase cut about one inch from the base of the stump to remove hardened sap to allow the tree to absorb water more easily.

Put the tree in water. If you don't want to bring the tree indoors right away, still put it in water and keep it out of the sun and wind. Sprinkle the branches with water to help prevent dryness. If you rest the tree against something make sure you rotate it once every day to keep the branches from being crushed.

Fire retardant sprays are available for fresh trees but Canadian Standards Association recommends immersing the butt in water at all times as a better safety measure. One suggested fireproof solution is as follows:

7 oz. Boracic Acid
7 oz. Borax
2 quarts water

Mix all ingredients. Place the solution in the base containers in which the tree stands. The solution lasts about three weeks but don't forget to refill your watering container often!

Who should receive the first Annual Alberta Environment Awards?

Your nominations could be instrumental in helping us select the first recipients of the Alberta Environment Awards.

This year marks the beginning of a special program to recognize and honour Albertans who have made significant contributions to the quality of our environment.

One award will be given annually in each of three categories: Individual Citizen, Industry, Business or Government Agency; and Educational Institution or Organization.

In order to be eligible, an individual or group will have been instrumental in

- increasing public awareness and understanding of an environmental problem or situation;
- identifying, reducing, solving or avoiding an environmental problem; or
- improving an aspect of Alberta's environment.

First consideration will be given to those individuals or groups whose work directly affects Albertans, although national or international achievements by Albertans will be considered.

Nominations must be submitted by December 31, 1986.

Alberta architect breaks with European tradition

By Joe Clark, MP
Douglas Cardinal

The people of Alberta were the first to accept the unique designs of architect Douglas Cardinal, who lives at Spruce Grove.

Now the work of this Alberta-born architect can be seen in the nation's capital as the National Museum of Civilization slowly takes shape along the banks of the Ottawa River.

The museum is being constructed in Hull, Quebec, across the river from our Houses of Parliament. It is being built of tyndal stone — the same Manitoba limestone used to construct the parliament buildings.

However, that is where the similarity ends. The Museum of Civilization is a long, low curved building which follows the drift of the land on which it lies. This is in keeping with Mr. Cardinal's design philosophy that we must break with the European tradition and create an architecture that reflects the uniqueness of our own lands and people.

The Museum of Civilization will house some two million artifacts which detail the life and history of all the peoples of Canada.

There is justice in the fact Mr. Cardinal, a Metis, has been awarded such a prestigious design commission. He began his study of architecture in the 1950s at the University of British Columbia but was asked to withdraw because, he recalls, professors there did not approve of his curved designs or his Metis background. Mr.

Cardinal was able to complete his studies at the University of Texas and soon returned to Alberta to set up his practice.

Most of his Alberta buildings are brick sculptures moulded into shell-like curves and spirals that result in rippling facades. St. Mary's Church in Red Deer, built in 1968, is one of the first examples. St. Alberta's civic and cultural complex and the steel-sided Space Science Centre in Edmonton are recent works.

Wishing Well resident is an avid horse racing fan

By Donna Haukedal
Nina Moore has not lost her zest for living.

She still drives her own car and is active at the Seniors' Drop-In Centre.

"Wednesday is my only day off," she laughs. But Nina's main sport interest is horse racing. Having grown up on a ranch west of Okotoks as well as living on a farm following her marriage, horses have always been an important part of her life. She used to enjoy riding, and still loves to go to the races.

Nina was born in Didsbury in 1916, the youngest of four children. Her earliest recollection is of living on the ranch near Okotoks.

She and her brother and sisters spent many hours tobogganing in the foothills. "As I was the youngest, I was always on the back end and didn't always make it down the hill (on the toboggan)," she laughed. "I always regretted when we were raising our children that there was no sizeable hill nearby," she adds.

They later moved to a farm north of Killam where she received most of her education in a small country school. Because of the Depression and shortage of money, she worked in town as a mother's helper to put herself through high school.

It was while visiting her brothers near Alder Flats she met her husband, Clarence Jorgenson. They were married in 1935.

They farmed north of Strome for 30 years where they were active in the community, the UFA and UFWA (United Farm Women's Association). They attended the United Church and Nina was an avid worker with the United Church Women (UCW).

They both drove school

bus in the early '50s to augment the farm income. Clarence died in 1965.

At the time of Clarence's death their eldest children, Ronald and Lenore, were married but Dale, then 16, and Sandra, 12, were still at home. They decided to leave the farm and Nina built a new dairy bar and fast-food service in Killam.

"We had a rather exciting opening day with all my family, friends and neighbors there. I think it would have been a disaster if my daughter-in-law Noreen Jorgenson, hadn't taken over the grill and organized us a bit."

the ice cream machine kept freezing up. However, it all turned out well and became a very lucrative business.

After the children left, Nina found the responsibility of handling the business alone difficult. (By this time she had 12 employees). She sold out in 1973 and moved to Red Deer where she worked in the General Hospital for two years.

She married Bill Moore in 1975 and they lived in Northern Ontario. Nina managed a coffee shop there until retirement. In 1982 they returned to Alberta.

Nina has lived in the Wishing Well apartments for two years and says she likes it. "If you want to be alone you can. If you want company all you have to do is walk into the hall," she says.

She spent a month in Vancouver this summer visiting family and friends and attended the P.N.E. Of course, her special interest there was the horse races.

She enjoys cooking and reads a lot, but doesn't care much for television. "I would rather read a good book and I've never, never watched those soap operas," she states. She misses her friends in Killam but keeps in touch, occasionally driving there for a visit.

Nina has 10 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Baby "ol' reliable" for worry-free winter driving

How many times have you talked about your car in human terms?

"It has a personality all its own," or, "I have to baby it."

You might endow your vehicle with 'flesh and blood' qualities — but it is, after all, only a machine. As a machine, your car is not susceptible to certain conditions in the same way as people.

Take windchill factor for instance. Windchill factor affects the human body differently than a car. The human body strives to maintain a constant temperature of 98.6 F. When a windchill factor is present more clothing is needed to insulate and protect the body and prevent it from becoming dangerously cold, or worse, from suffering the effects of exposure.

A car on the other hand, neither wears clothing nor needs to be protected from windchill. The only effect windchill has on a car is to cool the car more quickly than it would cool on a day of moderate temperature.

If you are concerned about your car's performance in winter, windchill is not a factor.

So now that we've convinced you that your car is not human, we need to provide you with pointers you'll need to keep it running like the perfectly tuned machine you know "Ol' Reliable" can be. Here are some of the areas you should be concentrating on:

Block heaters
When the temperature dips below -25 C, you must keep your block or circuit heaters plugged in. Four to five hours at -25 C causes engine fluids to thicken, ultimately affecting your car's ability to turn your engine over. In temperatures below -25 C, radiator coolant will begin to crystallize if the antifreeze level is low.

If you must park in a location where there is no electrical outlet, and the temperature drops below -25 C, start your engine every two hours and let it run for 15 to 20 minutes.

Batteries
At -18 C a car battery is only 40 per cent effective, yet an engine's resistance is two and a half times greater. If your battery hasn't enough juice to crank the engine, one solution would be to remove the battery from the car — making certain that you have followed the correct procedure described in your owner's manual — and bring it inside to warm up for an hour or so. Of course, keeping your block heater plugged in will help keep your car's fluids flowing more freely and help your battery turn your engine over so the best advice is to keep your block or circuit heater plugged in!

Oil
Using a thinner oil in -20 C weather allows the starter to turn the engine faster using less battery power. An SAE 5W/30 motor oil is suitable for a northern Alberta winter; the next best oil to choose is the all-purpose 10W/30.

Cooling systems
Make sure your antifreeze is good to -35 C. Have your radiator professionally drained, flushed and refilled with new antifreeze if it's been over three years since you've had it done. Rust and contaminants can block thermostats and ruin heat efficiency.

Belts
If you hear a squealing sound when you start or accelerate you may have a worn belt. Be sure to replace belts every three or four years. If it snaps in cold winter weather, you'll be colder than you bargained for.

Tires
Choose an appropriate tire to get you through the winter. The type of tire you choose depends on the type of conditions in which you drive. A smooth-tread, low bar cut is suitable for urban driving on hard-packed snow and slippery streets. This type of tire puts more rubber on the road surface creating a suction effect. Deep snow driving (on highways) demands snow tires, but there are a number of all-season tires on the market that combine deep cuts for snow and shallow cuts for ice. Generally speaking, an all-season radial is suitable for the kind of driving most individuals do.

Hoses
In a severe cold spell, a small defect like a hole or weak spot can cause the radiator hose to blow. This will stop your cold and could potentially cause severe damage to your engine in very cold weather.

OUR HOUSE

In "Home Again," the pilot episode of "Our House," which rebroadcasts SUNDAY, NOV. 30, on CTV, retired railroad worker Gus Witherspoon (Willfred Brimley) pulls out his model trains to cheer up his granddaughter Kris (Shannen Doherty) after her school refuses to grant her a transfer to a school for astronauts.

HIGHWAY TO HEAVEN

Tough, cynical U.S. senator Corky McCorkindale (guest star Eddie Albert) opposes efforts to get special legislation passed that might save a little girl's life, in "Jonathan Smith Goes to Washington," the episode of "Highway to Heaven," airing WEDNESDAY, DEC. 3, on CTV.
